Henry Ford's Birthday
His 9 Words—All Wrong
A Paleolithic Expert
More About Air Fighting
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

HENRY FORD, sixty-two years old yesterday, in mind and body as healthy as at thirty-two, thanks to constant mental activity, and temperate living, sends out this birthday message:

"I am living in today, not tomorrow or yesterday."

A short message, only nine words, and all WRONG.

Mr. Ford is living in tomorrow, and in the tomorrow of a thousand years hence. For where we work we live, and Ford, thanks to his industrial genius and economic wisdom, pushing the world ahead in its great problem of transportation, is working in and for the centuries ahead.

AND FORD is living in the past. AND ON THE PAST.

When this writer last had luncheon with Mr. Ford and a few of his ablest workmen and managers, there were more than a dozen kinds of bread on the table. Just then Ford was experimenting with bread. The wheat of which all those breads were made, the wheat in Ford's bones, flesh and blood, was developed from some weed of slight value, by the women of the Stone Age, fifty thousand years ago.

Ford lives and eats with those Stone Age women with red hair all over their bodies, big chins sticking out and one noble, valuable impulse, to beat decency into their husbands and brutality out of their sons.

AS HE LIVES in the past, so Ford WORKS in the past, the past of ancient days, when the first man-like creature discovered that a heavy load could be dragged more easily by putting under it a round log and letting the log roll under the load.

AFTER THAT came THE FIRST WHEEL which was one slice cut out of the log. Long afterwards came the two wheels, rolling on an axle dragged first by several of the women, later by one tame buffalo.

Then came the four wheeled wagon, the light four wheeled buggy, and then THE FOUR WHEELED FORD.

HENRY FORD'S giant factories, his sixty thousand workmen, his millions of capital all work with the brains of the savage who discovered that one man could pull an aurochs, weighing a ton, if he put a round log under the aurochs' body.

YOU LIVE in the past, Mr. Ford, and draw your dividends and powers of useful work from the past. Be grateful to it.

YOU SET an excellent example before your fellow men by working for the future.

The future will be grateful to you; as you must be grateful to the man that invented the wheel, the first man that melted iron ore into iron, and to a thousand others, every one of them part of your work today.

Many USEFUL and therefore happy RETURNS of the day.

A LEARNED GENTLEMAN, Dr. Leith, teaches geology at the University of Wisconsin and tells the scientific world: "Japan as a war power is a myth." Dr. Leith is a great geologist, but as a war expert he lives in the paleolithic age. He says, "Tokio lacks iron ore and coal." What of that? Japan controls the resources of China, and, more important, modern warfare can get along without iron, except the small quantity needed for flying machines. Wars will never again be settled by shooting away masses of iron.

FLYING MACHINES, high explosives, deadly gases, will mean victory or defeat in the next war. And in their manufacture Japan possesses experts as able as any in the world, and, incidentally, she has them at

NEW CLEWS OFFERED BY WOMEN MAY AID IN SOLVING TRAGEDY

Hudson, N. H., July 31.—The search for the slayer of the aged Gillis sisters narrowed down today to a hunt for a youth who was placed near the scene of the murder by Miss Bessie Eddy.

The police concentrated on this search upon hearing the sensational story of Miss Eddy, who not only passed the youth near the Gillis cottage about the time of the crime and noticed the doors of the house closed, but, a short time afterward, returned to find one door ajar.

When a youth of about twenty years and otherwise answering the description furnished by Miss Eddy is found he will be taken to police headquarters for inspection by Miss Eddy and others.

Another women who will be asked to try to identify him is Mrs. Kazimoir Januszeuski, storekeeper on Lowell road, Hudson, who declares a boy who had a $20 bill changed to buy a dollar's worth of candy came to her store either on the day the Gillis sisters were slain or the day afterwards.

According to Deputy Chief of Police Elmer F. Smith, the youth described by Miss Eddy may be a boy

MULTITUDE AT BRYAN BIER; ARMY AT GRAVE

Washington, July 31 (A.P.)—William Jennings Bryan rested in state simplicity in the "Church of Presidents" today while the city, the country and the world filed by his bier and paid tribute to his eminence.

Until 3 o'clock this afternoon the body of the Commoner will lie in the church, with thousands passing to look for a last time upon the craggy features, known wherever the printed word is known. Brief funeral service will be conducted at that hour and the body will be borne

COPS BATTLE 5 ARMED THUGS IN CAMBRIDGE

Five armed thugs in an automobile escaped the Metropolitan Park Police after a running gun battle on the Charles River road, Cambridge, early today.

In response to a request that the men fix the tail light on their machine, the quintet opened fire on Sergeant Charles H. Gardner, who was driving a patrol car.

The bullet tore its way through the body of the machine, passing within a few inches of the officer's head.

Motorcycle Broom of the Metropolitan force heard the shot and gave chase to the fleeing car. Along the

GETTING BOYS' OWN DEATH CASE STORIES

Police officials questioning the Lefebvre boys as the result of new clews discovered in the Gillis death mystery. Chums of the lads have been held and also will be quizzed in efforts to clear up certain points in the stories which the youngsters have told. At top is Miss Bessie Eddy of Hudson, N. H., who has furnished an important new clew in the case. She says she saw a boy near the Gillis home on the fatal day. In bottom photo, left to right, are Chief Connell, Charles Lefebvre, Raymond Lefebvre and Inspector Eddy.

JUMP EFFECTIVE AT ONCE; WHOLE STATE UP IN ARMS

Telephone rates throughout Boston and Massachusetts were boosted today by the State Department of Public Utilities.

The boost brings $8,460,000 additional revenue from subscribers into the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. coffers each year. The increase goes into effect tomorrow.

Roughly the telephone increase allowed figures an average of 19.5 per cent.

In its petition for higher rates to bring increased revenue, the telephone company filed a schedule of new rates that would bring it $9,460,000 annually. It thus gets nearly all the increase demanded.

In granting the boost, the Public Utilities Department allows the company approximately 89 per cent. of its requested raise.

When the higher rates were announced, a roar of protest went up from subscribers all over Massachusetts, for the boosts hit heaviest in comparison on the "little fellow."

Announced just half an hour before the opening of the stock market, the rate increase allowance, sent telephone stock

WIFE PAID $400 TO HAVE HUSBAND SLAIN

Chicago, July 31 (A.P.)—A strange tale of murder, in which a wife paid $400 to have her husband slain, the hired assassin employing another to do the shooting for $200, and the subsequent fleeing of the money from the slayer, was revealed to police in the case of Louis Noble, slain last December. The widow said she had paid $400 to have her husband slain, asserting he had abused her daughter by a former marriage, who corroborated the story. James Salino said he collected the money, but kept $200 for his share and had "the job done for the other $200." Andrew Capa, who admitted the shooting, said his wife had taken the $200 and gone to Milwaukee.

to a new high for the year, in the first hour of trading.

A partial list of new and old rates follows:

Unlimited residence, individual: Old rate $4, new rate $5.50.

Unlimited residence, 2-party: Old rate $3.25, new rate $4.50.

Measured residence, individual: Old rate $3, new rate $3.50, number of messages decreased from 80 to 75.

Measured residence, 2-party: Rate $2.75, with no change.

Unlimited suburban service, residence: Old rate $4, new rate $5.50.

Unlimited suburban residence, 2-party: Old rate $3.25, new rate $4.50.

Central Exchange Service, Measured A, business, individual. Old rate, $4.50, new rate $5.50.

Measured A, business, two-party. Old rate $4.00, new $4.50.

Business Measured, individual. Old rate, $4.25, new $5.00; number of messages increased from 55 to 100.

Private branch exchange, cordless type. Old rate $1.50 per position, new $2.50 per position.

PBX, cord type, 10 lines or less. Old rate $2, new $6.50.

Multiple boards, such as department stores and big business. Old rate $10, new $27.50.

Central Exchange service includes Back Bay, Beach, Blackstone, Bowdoin, Capitol, Circle, Congress, Copley, Dewey, Haymarket, Kenmore, Main and Richmond, serving cities and towns within an exclusive radius of Boston.

Although the fight against high electricity charges just won by the Boston Evening American was not decided until after nine years of taking and weighing evidence, the telephone hearing, out of which today's increased rates came, was completed in only 69 days.

MILLIONS FOR COMPANY.

The telephone increases, for comparison purposes will give the phone company each year $8,400,000 to cover a deficit for this year indicated as $662,438.59.

For the quarter ending June 30, the telephone company reported a deficit of ...165,609.59.

In allowing the increases the Public Utilities Board clipped an even $1,000,000 from the telephone schedule, but this reduced million in revenue will benefit only the luxury classes — not the ordinary subscriber, the "little fellow."

Illustrating—if the ordinary subscriber on a private line is required to pay much more for the yearly rental of his phone, but if a business man wishes an increase of lines to a private branch exchange (PBX) or an extension line, he will not be charged for it.

MANAGEMENT SCORED.

Picked out of the board's report was the following important points:

A criticism of the telephone company for raising salaries of officials and creating new positions in 1924 when it was in financial distress.

Criticism of management in its attitude in previous rate hearing.

Increases asked for service connection or installation charges disallowed.

Increase proposed for changed locations or type of station equipment within the premises, disapproved in part.

Proposed increases for excess messages disallowed.

Proposed increased rates on PBX switchboards materially cut.

Public declared protected against increased charges, pending any change in service desired.

Estimates that of the increased revenue received under new schedule of rates, approximately $2,000,000 will go for Federal, State and municipal taxes.

Declared that changes and readjustments will mean better and less discriminatory service.

Declared 9 per cent. dividend not unreasonable at the present time, because the company must be put in position to market its securities in order to raise funds to meet public demands.

HISTORY OF THE FIGHT.

The first petition for increased rates was filed by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company on April 14, 1914. This petition asked for increases on special forms of service.

While hearings on that petition were in progress the company filed a petition for a general increase in rates on December 1, 1924, and hearings on this petition began February 3, 1925. Hearings closed on July 17.

Evidence taken at the hearings held before the Public Utilities Commission at the State House covered 10,000 pages of record, approximately 3,000,000 words. Forty-eight witnesses testified and 278 exhibits were presented, 187 by the company, seventy-four by the city of Boston and seventeen by the Department of Public Utilities.

Covering fifteen months, the case was the longest the present Public Utilities Commission has had to deal with. In its decision the commission had to consider the effect it might have on 11,000 owners of the company's securities, more than 800,000 users of the company's services and a property of which the actual cost is said to be more than $210,000,000.

The telephone company, through its counsel, Attorney Ralph A. Stewart, asserted it considered it has a right to earn at least 8 per cent. on the fair value of its property, but that the proposed rates would produce only a little more than 8 per cent. on book value of the property.

In 1924, Stewart declared, the company earned only 3.7 per cent. on book value and never earned as much as 8 per cent. in the past five years.

MEANS BIG REVENUE.

Edgar J. Rich, counsel for the Associated Industries, who with E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel of the City of Boston, led the fight against the proposed new rate schedule, admitted that the company was entitled to a very substantial increase in rates but contended that the proposed schedule would bring in far more revenue than was necessary.

The City of Boston also claimed that the telephone company was asking too much.

The company officials themselves, notably Lambert N. Whitney, commercial manager, estimated the total of the proposed increases at $11,940,000 for the whole of New England and $8,460,000 for Massachusetts. The general increases throughout this State, Whitney said, would average 22 per cent. while Samuel M. Mildram, expert employed by the City of Boston, estimated this average at 31 per cent.

After the hearings on the first telephone petition began, Corporation Counsel Sullivan filed petitions with the Commission in July, 1924, in behalf of twelve Massachusetts cities, asking for a general investigation of the company as well as reduction in rates.

Mayors of Cambridge, Worcester, Quincy, Medford, Melrose, Woburn, Taunton, Marlboro, Holyoke, Northampton and Westfield joined with Mayor Curley in this petition.

The Boston Retail Trade Board went on record before the commission as strongly opposed to the increases in rates for private branch exchanges and the reduction in time on toll calls.

In 1924, however, the commission granted the company permission to make increases in toll charges.

In December of last year the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company came forward with its proposition for a general increase.

Here's What Telephone Company Asked For

An increase of three cents per telephone per day!

This was to be the effect of the new schedule of rates proposed by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company on December 1, 1924. Among the other features of the new schedule were the following:

Rate increases of more than 25% in Metropolitan Boston.

Increase of 23% over the entire State.

Increased as high as 47% for some classes of service.

Increased rates on one and two-party suburban residence services from $3.25 a month to $4.50 and $5.50 a month.

Increased rates for private branch exchange switchboards and private branch exchanges.

Elimination of the 4-party unlimited suburban service.

Elimination of the 4-party coin box service.

YOUNG ELOPERS ARE CAPTURED IN BELMONT

A perfectly good elopement ended prematurely early today on a Belmont highway, with a squad of motorcycle police clustered around a small motor truck.

In the truck were Irene Beal, 15, No. 857 Pleasant street, Newton, and Nicholas Spartichino, 18, of No. 188 Raymond street, Cambridge.

Boy and girl are back home today, their dream of a lurid romance rudely shattered. Because of their youth, they will not be prosecuted.

They were caught after a two-hour chase that extended through Brighton, Watertown, Cambridge and most of Belmont.

The boy said they were trying to head toward Rhode Island to get married.

Search for the slopers was started yesterday, when the girl's father reported that not only his daughter, but his motor truck was missing. At midnight the trail was picked up and soon the motorcycle police and officers in an auto had caught sight of the lovers. But young Spartichino led them a merry chase across lots and down dangerous alleys before he was compelled to surrender.

YOUTH SOUGHT AS SLAYER

who is a relative of a man who only recently in local court was sentenced to six months in jail and $100 fine for attacking a seventy-three-year-old man. This man is out on bail awaiting trial in the higher court.

Three Hudson youths, friends and playmates of Charles LeFebvre, fifteen years old, chore boy for Helen and Georgianna Gillis, the aged sisters who were slain, were grilled today by the police.

The boys were taken into custody by Inspector Edward McCarthy of the Nashua police who has been working on the case since the sisters were found with their skulls crushed in their home.

No formal charge of arrest has been made against the boys.

"They have been missing from their usual haunts since the murder and we want to question them" was the laconic statement of the Nashua inspector.

The boys, it is understood, will be viewed today by Mrs. Jamusheskuthe, the shopkeeper, who changed a $20 bill when a youth purchased a dollar's worth of candy in her place shortly after the sisters were slain.

Mrs. Jamusheskuthe has already looked at Caleb Lefebvre, the chore boy, and his younger brother, Raymond.

The authorities are not convinced that the identification made by the shopwoman is positive. After running down clues until far into the night the police discovered the whereabouts of the three boys who were almost constant companions of the Lefebvre boy prior to the crime.

Sheriff O'Dowd stated today that he did not care to reveal his plans concerning Raymond Lefebvre.

The boy's age, Raymond being but 11 years old, made the situation a difficult one, and then the straightforward and unaffected denial made by the boy in the berry patch had its effect.

Mrs. Jamusheskuthe stated that she is not positive whether it was the after of Wednesday, July 22, the day the sisters were murdered, or Thursday, the day following, when their bodies were found, that the boy changed the $20 bill at her shop.

SHERIFF HOPEFUL.

Sheriff O'Dowe is optimistic over the turn the case has taken.

"Charlie has admitted lying. He told serious lies for apparently no reason and other accounts of time and places we have heard from other members of this family do not agree," the sheriff said.

The most surprising discrepancy was when Lebombard changed the story he told after he was taken into custody that he was not in Hudson last week both before and after the murder of the sisters. He further stated he was helping Charlie Lefebvre mow the lawn of the Gillis home on Tuesday of last week, the day before the murders.

FIND ANOTHER WITNESS.

Another important witness was discovered by Police Inspector Edward McCarthy and his statement checked up with one made by Ernest Trufant would place the time of the murder during the noon hour of Wednesday. This latter witness was found tonight. He is William Pennis, driver of a baker's cart from Nashua, who left doughnuts at the sisters' residence at times. He states that on Wednesday he was at the Gillis home a little after 12:30 and got no response to his knocks and saw no one. He was arrested, but later released.

river road the automobile and the motorcycle sped, with the men in the car raining bullets from their revolvers at the officer, while Breem, guiding his machine with one hand, returned the fire as best he could.

In the vicinity of the Lars Anderson bridge the thugs made their escape by detouring through alleys and back streets.

Sergeant Gardner, who is attached to the Beacon Station of the Metropolitan force, was touring his district in the police car when he noticed a machine ahead of him had no tail light, while a spare tire concealed the registration plate.

Putting on speed, the officer pulled alongside the car and called to the men, directing them to stop and fix the tail light. One of the party in the speeding machine drew an automatic revolver and fired point blank at the officer, while the driver of the car stepped on the foot accelerator.

Speeding along the river road, the officer drew close to the car, when one of the men, leaning out of the side of the car, began firing at the policeman.

The officer lost some speed in firing at the fleeing men, and their car finally escaped in a side street.

Cambridge policemen joined in the chase for the thugs, but the men made good their escape.

ARMY IN HONOR TO BRYAN, MAN OF PEACE

Thousands View Body as Veterans of '98 Guard the Coffin In "Church of Presidents"

across the Potomac to be interred slopes of Arlington to be interred among America's hallowed dead.

With sunrise this morning, the government gave official recognition to the Commoner's passing. All flags atop government buildings dropped to half mast in his honor by decree of the President, and the State Department, over which he presided for two turbulent years, closed its doors.

THOUSANDS BRAVE RAIN.

Bryan lay in his simple Sagdraped casket. He won a tribute seldom accorded to private citizens. Shorn of all office and boasting only the proud title of "The Commoner," Bryan was given a fealty from the common people of Washington equalling that laid at the feet of a martyred President. From noon yesterday until midnight a constant stream of people passed by his bier for a last glimpse at his placid countenance. Twenty thousand people were in that stream.

The church doors were closed during the night, but early this morning, despite a heavy, misty rain, the lines reformed and the procession started anew. It continued throughout the forenoon until the church was closed again, in preparation for the funeral service.

Tributes were showered upon the man, who in life was thrice derided national honors from the hands of the people. Whereas then, his foes outnumbered his friends, today, in his eternal sleep, all the world seemed his friend.

HONORS OF WAR.

Soldiers and sailors would have stood guard over his casket had his widow desired it. But there was instead only a guard of honor by six Spanish-American war veterans, comrades of Bryan in 1898 when he commanded for a time a regiment of Nebraska volunteer infantry and won his right to sleep in Arlington.

However, a martial note will close the last earthly chapter after a lifetime devoted to the cause of peace.

It will be the lingering, silvery note of a bugle, sounded by an army trumpeter. As "taps"—the soldier's farewell—echoes over the Virginia hills, the body of Bryan will be left to sleep out time with the nation's warrior dead in Arlington National Cemetery.

Nor will that be the only reminder of war at the burial rites of the commoner. After the church has performed the last sad offices for the dead statesman, eight Confederate, sun-bronzed veterans of the regular army will lower his body to its resting place on the slope of Davey knoll.

Standing at rigid attention beside the newly-turned grave on the grassy slope, the trim figures of 130 fighting men in khaki will form a striking contrast with the somber attire of Bryan's lay brethren who will follow his body to the cemetery.

ARMY BAND FOR DIRGE.

At one side will be another evidence that the United States government has not forgotten one of the man who offered his life for the country in the stirring days of 1917. The United States Army Band, which will render the closing anthems of the burial service. Until after the cortege reaches the gate of the cemetery, the church and civil authorities will have full charge of the funeral, which will be given as that of the humblest citizen, though it will be impressive.

In compliance with the request of Mr. Bryan, no military honors will not be used to carry the body from the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and the firing of the customary volley across the grave after interment will be omitted.

LINE OF FUNERAL.

A black hearse has been selected instead of the caisson. There will be no suggestion of military display in the procession that winds its way through the business district, past the Lincoln memorial, the Washington monument and the statute of John Paul Jones, across the highway bridge and onto the Rolling Green Cemetery.

There will be no engchers in the cortege. There will be no outriders. Automobiles will carry the bereaved family and the friends of the Commoner.

Services at the church, where Bryan once worshipped, beginning at 2 o'clock, will consume about half an hour, according to the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, the pastor, who will read the sermon.

Radio arrangements have been made to broadcast the services to millions in the country.

A musical prelude will be given by the church quartet. It will include "Lead Kindly Light" and "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," two of Bryan's favorite hymns.

TENTATIVE PALL-BEARERS.

Although a tentative list of honorary pall bearers was issued by Ben G. Davis, secretary to Bryan while he headed the State Department, it will probably be revised and a list of active pall bearers announced after the arrival of William Jennings Bryan, Jr.

The tentative list includes:

Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, Senator Henry F. Ashburst of Arizona, Representative William A. Oldfield of Arkansas, Joseph Da.sels of North Carolina, former secretary of the navy; Charles A. Douglas of Washington, Clem Shaver of West Virginia, and Col. P. H. Callahan of Louisville, Ky.

Bryan's Will Rests in Safe at Miami

Miami, Fla., July 31.—The last will of William Jennings Bryan, written in his own hand, is in his safe here. It was drawn only a few days before his departure for Dayton, Tenn., for the Scopes trial. No one, except Mrs. Bryan, knows the contents of the will, attaches of the Commoner's home at Marymount declared.

The will, covering three foolscap pages, was witnessed by his secretary, W. E. Thompson, and his chauffeur.

Mrs. Bryan, it was declared here, will publish the memoirs of her late husband. Taking up the thread of the autobiography which the Commoner was working on at the time of his death.

Oklahoma and Iowa Honor Bryan by Official Decree

Oklahoma City, July 31 (A. P.).—Acting Governor W. J. Holloway issued an order closing all State offices between 1:30 and 2:00 o'clock during funeral services for William Jennings Bryan at Washington.

Des Moines, Ia., July 31 (A.P.).—Flags on all State buildings were at half-staff today, honoring William Jennings Bryan, following an order issued by Governor John Hammill.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 31 (A.P.).—Governor Hunt issued a proclamation asking the police of the State to pay a silent tribute to William Jennings Bryan during the hour of his funeral and burial in Washington today.

FIGHT WILLETT $10,000,000 VICTORY

Counsel for the defendants in the $15,000,000 suit brought by George F. Willett against Robert F. Herrick and a number of Boston bankers, in which a verdict was rendered by a jury for about $10,000,000, today filed exception in the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham.

The exceptions of all of the defendants take up 19,000 typewritten pages.

The exceptions of Robert F. Herrick are in twenty-four typewritten volumes, nine exhibits and four requests. Those of Kidder, Peabody & Co. in twelve volumes and another volume of requests. Exceptions by S. S. Mosely & Co. consist of twenty-four volumes, nine exhibits and four requests.

The trial was the longest on record, taking only thirteen months. The exceptions will be heard and reviewed by the Supreme Judicial Court.

"Spoon Safely" in Your Auto at Darien, Ct.

Darien, Ct., July 31 (A.P.).—Cupid has a right to be in an automobile, provided he obeys traffic rules, in the opinion of Chief of Police Harry Smith, who has a tender spot in his heart for swains and sweethearts. This town has a brand new police force by act of the recent general assembly, and Chief Smith, a veteran of the Stamford force, is organizing it.

He advises young folks "to spoon safely" and has made these rules:

"Don't seek the dark lanes; stick to the lighted highways; folks are not easily shocked.

"Don't forget to keep your motor running, you may want to get a flying start.

"And, above all, park on top of a hill, facing down, so you can start fast when my officers get after you."

1,500-PAGE EXCEPTIONS FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

Nearly 1,500 typewritten pages of exceptions taken by counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of the South Braintree payroll robbery and double murder of 1920, were forwarded to the Supreme Court today by the clerk of the Superior Court at Dedham.

STATE IS LAST HOPE TO HALT BIG STRIKE

Building Trades Peace Now Depends Upon Mass. Mediators

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration is today regarded as the last agency that can prevent a disastrous strike in Boston building trades.

Government conciliators have failed to bring the warring factions together, and today the builders of Greater Boston will definitely reject the peace plan suggested by Mayor Curley. The State mediators alone are left as an agency to prevent the strike of 25,000 laborers and tradesmen who are affiliated.

The Mayor's plan called for the creation of a board of seven, three to be named by the employers, three by the employes and the seventh to be named by President Coolidge, to determine whether the laborers are entitled, under the "peace pact" agreements, to immediate arbitration of their demands for increased wages.

The plan was put forward by the Mayor at a conference Monday between representatives of the United Building Trades' Council and the Building Trades' Employers. It was accepted by the men's representatives. The employers' representatives agreed to place it before the board of councillors for consideration.

This was done, and, although Secretary John F. Walsh and the builders' group refused to disclose the action taken by the board, on the ground that it first must be reported to the Mayor, it was learned that the board rejected the proposition.

In accepting the Mayor's proposition last Monday, the adjustment board of the United Building Trades Council deferred action towards setting a date for the general strike to begin. It was scheduled for last Tuesday.

PICKWICK PIERS RESTED ON BLUE CLAY

The character of the soil under the fallen Pickwick Club figured prominently today in the testimony given at the trial of the twelve defendants before the collapse.

Charles A. Leary, a superintendent employed by the Charles R. Gow Construction Company, was the first witness and said the concrete piers were 16 feet.

He was questioned both by Assistant District Attorney Alpert and Francis Garland, counsel for Harry Haven, architect, and one of the defendants.

PLANNED FOR PIERS.

Assistant District Attorney Alpert began the examination of Mr. Leary, who told of talks with Mr. Tobin and Mr. Perkins of the Pulitz Corporation.

They discussed the Gow company's putting in some piers for the Pulitz company, Mr. Leary said, and he spoke of the height of the wall at the Pickwick Club and asked Mr. Perkins if he had made provision for maintaining the elevation. Mr. Perkins said he had.

Leary said that following this talk he had submitted figures to the estimator of the Gow company. The work was started on May 14, although the actual contract did not go through until July 3.

They started the work on the authority conveyed in a letter from officials of the Pulitz Company.

Mr. Leary told of the excavations for and pouring of the concrete piers. He said they made the excavations for the piers 10 feet by 3 feet at the bells, and not 10 feet by 2.

WIDTH OF BELLS.

Witness said the width of the bells was a few inches in excess of two feet but was never intended to be three feet.

Mr. Alpert questioned him as to the nature of the soil he found in excavating. Witness replied he found a small amount of sand, but mostly hard yellow clay and hard blue clay, while later was the kind the piers rested on.

Judge Lummus asked Mr. Leary if the basement of the building next to the Pickwick, which was torn down, was intact when he did his work or was already in process of demolition by the excavators.

Leary replied that up to the time the piers were in the basement was intact and the basement level was three feet higher than that of the top of the piers.

Attorney Francis Garland, for Harry Haven, architect, questioned the witness as to the character of the soil.

OSBORN C. WOOD NOT TO CONTEST DIVORCE

Tampa, July 31 (AP).—Osborn C. Wood, former army officer and a son of Major-General Leonard Wood, Governor-General of the Philippines, stated he did not intend to contest the divorce suit filed by his wife in Wilmington, Del.

NEWPORT SOCIETY BEAUTY QUEEN

LIGHT VICTORY SAVES USERS MILLIONS

Wife Frees Husband; Pays 'Other Woman' $20,000

AMERICAN VICTORY LAUDED

Public Leaders Hail Light Rate Cut as Great Achievement

A saving of more than $1,000,000 a year to home users of electricity, small storekeepers and occupants of offices is the effect of the victory wrung from the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston by the Boston Evening American.

This is the declaration of E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel of the city of Boston, and Attorney Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., counsel for the Boston Evening American in the light rate fight.

The saving is won for consumers of electric light current in thirty-eight cities and towns.

The saving since the Evening American, the City of Boston and other petitioners began their fight against extortionate light rates nine years ago has already reached $8,000,000, according to Mr. Sullivan.

SAVE $1,000,000 YEARLY.

"As this class of consumers increases, the saving becomes greater, and it is already more than $1,000,000 a year for consumers over an area of 600 square miles," declared Attorney Hurlburt.

Praise for men high in public affairs and from the "common people" poured into the Boston Evening American offices today, lauding this newspaper on its victory for the people in forcing the rates down to 8½ cents per kilowatt hours.

With the continuance of the free lamp privilege, the rate is in substance 8 cents. The new rate is effective not later than September 1.

The existing rate is 9½ cents. When the Boston Evening American and other petitioners, representing 148,000 consumers, began their fight nine years ago, the rate was virtually 11 cents, although nominally but 10½. The 8½-cent rate now becomes the maximum.

The forced reduction was made by the Public Utilities Commission in response to the petition of the Boston Evening American and others, the fight in the past few years having been carried on almost entirely by this newspaper and the City of Boston.

A few weeks ago the City of Boston decided it was wise to accept a compromise offer. The Edison Electric Illuminating Company offered to make its rate 8½ cents for residences, provided in return they were allowed to compute charging depreciation for a year.

DIVIDEND EXCESSIVE.

Attorney Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., counsel for the Boston Evening American, thought it wise to go ahead with the fight, and his judgment was confirmed by the Commission's decision cutting the rate to 8½ cents, not only for residences, but for thousands of stores and offices.

The Commission, in its decision, recognizes the company's proposal to forego depreciation simply as a means of maintaining its 12 per cent. dividend.

That dividend the Public Utilities Commission finds is excessive, and the commissioner points out that it could easily be reduced to 10 per cent. without working hardship on the stockholders.

A minority of the Commission wanted to make the rate still lower, namely, 8 cents including the free lamp privilege.

They pointed out that the Edison company could afford to sell electricity to the mass of the people at 8 cents, and give free lamps in addition, if they made a readjustment, as they are expected to, of their power and contract-lighting rates.

AFFECTS ABOUT 200,000.

The rate-cut attained at the end of the nine-year fight affects 180,000 to 200,000 consumers, over an area of 600 square miles and including Boston and thirty-seven other cities and towns.

Previously, as a result of the fight against the electric light interests, the Edison company cut rates to 10 cents in March, 1922, and to 9½ cents in September, 1922.

The fight of the Boston Evening American against extortionate rates began August 11, 1916.

After September 1, 1922, there were no more cuts, and near the close of the hearings on the petition last April, Charles L. Edgar, president of the Edison Company, de-

KEPT MAN IN JAIL 5 MONTHS

He Was Held in Contempt for Refusal to Porvide for First Girl's Child

New York, July 31 (A.P.).—Henry A. Taylor, promoter who says he is broke, is a free man today after five months in jail because his wealthy wife refused until now to pay $20,125 for the support of another woman.

The first thing Taylor, once wealthy, did was to buy himself a new suit and a lobster supper. He was committed to jail for contempt proceedings brought by Mrs. Genevieve R. Elder of Stratford, Ct., to compel him to carry out an agreement made in 1905, by which he was to establish a $20,000 trust for the support of their child, now dead.

Taylor deposited only $9,000. He was married in 1908 and has three children. He denied the child born to Mrs. Elder was his.

Mrs. Marguerite Taylor in refusing to pay the money recently said she did not sympathize with or condone her husband's act, but she said because she was "sick and tired of the whole business." She estimated her wealth as between $750,000 and $1,000,000, none of which she got from her husband.

As far as legal proceedings go he apparently would have remained in jail for life unless the money had been paid.

FAIR, BUT COOL, WEEK-END IS WEATHER PREDICTION

Showers tonight, clearing Saturday, and then a couple of days of fair and somewhat abnormally cool weather for the next two days is Forecaster Loveland's dope on the weekend weather today. There is a disturbance central just south of Chicago which is causing showers today all the way from Block Island to Minneapolis and heavy rain in the Ohio Valley. This will probably pass over Boston tonight. Behind the rains is a big area of cool, fair weather, centred over the Dakotas early today, which sent the mercury down to the 46 degree mark in some sections. This extreme of cold weather will not obtain in Boston, but by Sunday the weather here will be such as to make a weekend not uncomfortable in shores.

SOMERVILLE POLICEMAN "CHAMP" BERRYPICKER

Picking up crooks and violators of the law on West Broadway is the nightly pastime of Patrolman Walter L. Groves who covers the High lands, but in his spare time he is the champion berry picker of the department. He visited a farm in Green field, N. H., in company with his son, Patrolman Walter J. Groves of West Roxbury police station, and in less than three hours they picked eighty-eight quarts of berries.

From one bush Walter J. Groves filled an eight quart pail. On his last day off he visited the same place, owned by a relative of the lady, and came away with 63 quarts in less than three hours.

MALDEN FLOOD STARTS AS BOYS BUILD DAM

When Spot Pond Brook suddenly started to rise and overflow its banks without apparent cause, flooding foundation work in process of construction in Malden, the police were appealed to.

Patrolman John T. Murphy made a hurried trip along the banks of the brook and near Clinton street discovered a group of boys paddling around on a raft in a new pond. When they saw the officer they jumped into the water, swam ashore and fled.

The patrolman's investigation revealed a newly-constructed dam across the brook, built by the boys.

MRS. ROOSEVELT AND SON BRIEF VISITORS IN BOSTON

While on her way to Camp Mowitgusku, North Belgrave, Me., Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., wife of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, and her son, Theodore Roosevelt, 2d, stopped in Boston long enough to let friends know she was here and on her way to a quiet rest. The Roosevelt party came from Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York, where they make their home permanently. Colonel Roosevelt is now in Accia on a hunting trip.

Mrs. Theus Munds was today hailed as the "Queen of Beauty," at Newport, R. I., having received 9,515 votes to the 3,134 cast for Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, jr., her nearest rival, in a beauty contest at a fete in aid of Newport Hospital.

WIFE BEGS RUM MEN NOT TO SELL TO HUBBY

It is a pretty tough row to hoe when wives have to go about and personally beg those hombres who not so well to their husbands. But that's the case in Malden, said Judge Thomas P. Riley of the Malden District Court.

Mrs. William V. Burke testified that she had gone to four places while a comely show of her home and had begged the owners not to sell liquor to her husband. In one place, she testified, she was thrown out, in another she was told that her husband had been told to keep away from the premises. She testified that husband had spent his money from an insurance company when injured and had spent it all for liquor. She supplied the names of the alleged sellers to Judge Riley.

"This still proves what I have repeatedly said from the bench," said Judge Riley, "that there are many places in Malden where booze is being sold right under the noses of the police. I don't want to have to make women informers on these kinds of places, but none of the police seem willing to act."

NICARAGUAN MOBS STONE AMERICAN MISSIONS

New York, July 31 (A.P.).—As other demonstration against American missionaries at Granada, Nicaragua, the second within two weeks, is described in a dispatch from Managua.

A church belonging to the Central American Mission was surrounded by a mob Monday night, being saved from damage by the intervention of the police. A native woman who was in the building was injured. The police arrested eleven of those believed to have been responsible for the outrage.

In the previous attack, on July 19, which prompted the Americans to request the sid of the Nicaraguan Government and of the American Minister, the residence of the missionaries was stoned and the mission was bombed. The lives of the three missionaries—two women and one man—were endangered, but they escaped without injury.

ITALIAN AMBASSADOR GOING BACK TO ROME

Washington, July 31 (A.P.).—Ambassador De Martino will sail for Rome next week for important consultations with his government, and, although the announcement gave no details, indications were that the Italian debt negotiations, now temporarily suspended, was one of the major subjects to be discussed.

MRS. MUNDS IS BEAUTY TITLE WINNER

Newport, July 31.—Mrs. J. Theus Munds, the former Elsie Sallus, of New York, is Newport society's queen of Beauty. At the closing of the fete given by the women's Aid Assn. of Newport Hospital Mrs. Munds received 9515 votes in the beauty contest.

Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., the former Laura Biddle of Philadelphia, was second with 3134 votes. Her husband is a well known Harvard man.

The prize for the most popular girl went to Miss Miriam de Rahm of New York with 1,732 votes and Miss Edith Taylor, second, with 1,573. Mrs. William Burden won the best dressed women contest and her husband was elected the most popular man. Mrs. John Wanamaker, Jr., was second in the best dressed woman feature.

"Lullaby" Worden was the bandsmoke man.

FOOTPRINTS MATCHED IN FRATRICIDE TRIAL

Bristol, Mass., July 31, (AP).—Howard Moore, 18 years old, accused of slaying his brother, Thomas, 23, was calmly at his father's side while the state introduced circumstantial evidence at the second day of his trial.

Two policemen testified the defendant's shoes fitted into footprints found under the living room window of the Moore home, through which a load of buckshot was fired, killing Thomas while he talked with his mother.

CHICAGO CIVIC THEATRE PLAN IS ABANDONED

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—The Chicago Journal and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick and others, who had planned a civic theatre to produce modern and classical drama of a high standard at reasonable prices, had abandoned the project.

Mrs. McCormick, the Journal said, had refused to guarantee the rental of a theatre, although she had offered to "do more than her share" in financing the project.

MELLON DENIES TALE HE INTENDS TO RESIGN

Southampton, L. I., July 31.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, who is spending the Summer here at the Rea cottage announced through his private secretary that there was no truth in published reports that he contemplated resigning his post in the cabinet.

FREIGHT CLAIMS CONFERENCE PLANNED

Plans for a New England freight claims conference on October 15, to be held in the Copley Plaza Hotel, were discussed at a meeting of the New England Traffic League at the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

This conference will be a joint meeting of all freight claim agents of the United States, and important traffic and shipping men of New England.

Its chief objects will be to seek better co-operation of adjustment of freight claims, and to minimize claims by better handling and packing of goods.

Agents of New England railroads have been named a committee representing all roads to perfect a program for a three-day conference of railroad agents. The freight claims conference will last only one day.

Those attending the meeting were: W. H. Day, chairman of the committee and manager of the Transportation Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; C. E. Butman, W. L. Hulbert, C. P. Baldwin and A. K. Tapper, of Boston; W. H. Pease, Bridgeport, Ct.; W. F. Price, Glastonbury, Ct.; C. N. Moren, Brattleboro, Vt.; C. H. Davis, Manchester, N. H.; A. H. Ferguson, New Bedford.

PLOTTED TO KIDNAP TOM MIX'S DAUGHTER

Los Angeles, July 31.—Edward Sarg, forty, San Francisco resident, pleaded guilty in police court to a charge of disturbing the peace made against him by the city prosecutor's office after an investigation of reported plot to kidnap Ruth Mix, thirteen, daughter of Tom Mix.

Plan Atlantic City to New York Via Blimp Route

Atlantic City, N. J., July 31 (I.N.S.).—Passenger airships, Atlantic City to New York.

Plans to make this possible were launched here today with the appointment of an organization committee to select an advisory unit of prominent capitalists to get behind the proposition. Prominent men, including Mayor Edward Bader of Atlantic City, are members of the organization committee.

Initial specifications call for a giant dirigible of 1,000,000 cubic feet, capable of bearing forty-five passengers.

The dirigible would be equipped with an observation deck, smoking compartment, dining room service and other comforts.

The trip would take about four hours each way.

BOY HIT BY AUTO AS HE RUNS IN STREET

Six-year-old Frank Sousa of No. 9 Marion street, Somerville, was injuerd about the head and body, when he ran out of a yard at No. 37 Springfield street, Somerville, into the street and was struck by a touring automobile, operated by Simon Newman of No. 122 Cambridge street, Cambridge. Newman picked up the lad and took him to the Cambridge Relief Hospital, where his condition is not regarded as serious.

YOUTH OF TWENTY IS HELD IN 3 SLAYINGS

Richmond, Va., July 31 (A.P.).—Rudolph E. Disse, twenty, was held responsible by a coroner's jury today for the deaths of Mrs. Vivian Tomlin Perry; Henry G. Carter and Detective Sergeant J. Harvey Burke, who were shot to death here Tuesday.

TROLLEY CARS QUIT 2 TOWNS IN PLYMOUTH

Brockton, Mass., July 31 (A.P.).—Manager H. S. Golden of the Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway Company announced today that all service between Bryantville and Whitman, a distance of ten miles and serving the towns of Pembroke, Hanson and Whitman, would be discontinued Sept. 13.

The company will not even operate buses over this stretch and say private automobiles have ruined it for their business. For the present the company will operate between Bryantville and Plymouth.

Fred Carey of Whitman, who conducts a big bus line business in this section has petitioned the selectmen of Hanson, Whitman and Pembroke for the right to operate his buses over the abandoned territory.

PRISON SENTENCE FOR SCHLEIFER IS VACATED

New Haven, Ct., July 31 (A.P.).—A State prison sentence of not less than three and one-half years and not more than five years, imposed upon Ernest Schleifer, nationally known labor leader, in the Criminal Superior Court here on a charge of having incited New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad strikers to violence, has been vacated and a new trial ordered by the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors. The high court found error.

Schleifer was employed by the International Association of Machinists as an organizer. He came here in November, 1922, when repair shop employes went on strike. This is the second time he has won on an appeal to the Supreme Court.

VANISHING GIRL AGAIN DROPS FROM SIGHT

Sixteen-year-old Angeline Mazza of Cottage street, Watertown, who disappeared several months ago and was brought back by her brother, Peter, after a search, has again vanished.

The girl dropped from sight for the second time last Monday, after leaving home in search of employment. Her parents have appealed to the police to locate her.

The first time Miss Mazza left home she went in the company of a Belmont girl. Both girls were found soon after at the home of a friend in Cambridge.

The missing girl is about five feet tall, of dark complexion, and has dark bobbed hair. She wore a red dress, black shoes and stockings, and a henna-colored coat when last seen.

MRS. BANCROFT PROVIDES FOR CARILLONS

M. Lefevere Will Continue Chimes Concerts at St. Stephen's, Cohasset

Through the generosity of Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, the donor of the carillon, it has been arranged to have M. Kamiel Lefevere continue his concerts at St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, through August. M. Lefevere is the assistant carillonneur at Malines Cathedral, Cardinal Mercier's church.

The concerts will be given on Sundays from 3 to 4 P. M. and on Tuesdays from 8:30 to 9:30 P. M. Also on Sundays M. Lefevere will play on the carillon for fifteen minutes before and for the same length of time after the 11 A. M. service. The last concert will be played on Tuesday, September 1, at 8:30 P. M.

On Sunday, August 23, and Tuesday, August 25, request programs will be played, for which the public is invited to make suggestions and to send them in writing to M. Lefevere, Cohasset.

Owing to the density of the motor traffic it is planned to divert all cars from Cohasset Common during the hour of the concert. The Common and adjacent streets will be closed for ten minutes before and during the concerts.

"It is gratifying to have applause so generously given for M. Lefevere's playing," said the Rev. Charles C. Wilson, rector of St. Stephen's. "But I would like to make this suggestion, that the applause be signified by hand clapping and not by 'honking' motor horns.

Deer Cove Inn Setting for North Shore Bazaar

Numerous Smart Matrons to Stage Event Tomorrow in Aid of Community Service

Betty Alden

DEER COVE INN, DOWN IN Swampscott, is Sweet Charity's setting tomorrow, when numerous smart matrons of the North Shore colony stage a grand bazaar with all sorts of side attractions. Boston's well-known organization, Community Service and its work for disabled ex-service men in hospitals in the background with a train of amusements and attractions in the foreground, will draw a fine attendance.

OF COURSE the Shore's dramatic set is enrolled. Mrs. John Barrymore and members of Hamilton MacFadden's Empire Theatre Repertory Company are to appear. Miss Elsie Ferguson is to pour. There is a cabaret show, dancing, moving pictures of social lights, the Japanese dancer, Michow Itow, and an auction, with posters by notable artists put up for sale.

ORLANDO HOULAND, the owner of that picturesque Marblehead home, "The Lookout," in Lookout Court, an artist of wide fame, has contributed a poster, also that other internationally known artist, Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd. All the Shore's artist colonies from Marblehead to Rockport have sent posters, as one of the countless attractions. And over all there spreads the patronage of the President and Mrs. Coolidge, who have promised, if possible, to look in at Deer Cove Inn some time during the day.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BOUCHER MORRIS (Louise Mather Page) sail tomorrow from New York aboard the steamship Conte Verdi for Mediterranean ports on the first stage of their wedding journey, which eventually ends in Constantinople, where Mr. Morris is established in business and where the young people are to live.

EN ROUTE to the Near East they spend a few weeks in Italy, where Mrs. Morris has studied and lived much since her debut some three Winters ago. With her delicate loveliness, elan and flair for the picturesque dress, she was very popular during her brief stays in town. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, live in West Newton. Mrs. John B. Morris, the elder, was Violet Willing of Philadelphia.

THE RECEPTION this afternoon given by Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Lowell Cabot of "The Oaks," the Beverly Farms place, honoring the British and Italian Embassy staffs, continues brilliantly the diplomatic aspect of North Shore entertaining. Much as the absence of the Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, and the gracious Lady Isabella Howard is regretted, British officialdom is most happily represented.

COLONEL C. E. G. CHARLTON, Military Attache, with Mrs. Charlton, and Mr. Henry Getty Chilton, counsellor of the Embassy staff, and Mrs. Chilton head the list. As to the Italian royal representatives, they are the Italian Ambassador himself and his wife, the Donna Da Martino, popular members of the Ambassadorial set up from Washington for the Summer season.

WALDRON PLANS BIG BENEFIT FOR FUND

Drive for Alexander's Widow and Children Closes August Eighth

With the big entertainment just one week away, the Alexander fund benefit program at Waldron's Casino on the night of August 7, is being rapidly arranged by Charles Waldron, owner and manager of the popular playhouse.

Nor is Mr. Waldron ending his labors in behalf of the fund there. In addition he is looking out for the sale of the tickets and devoting every energy to the end that the all-star performance may be the best ever shown in the Hub.

The fund for the widow and six children of Inspector Alexander, killed in the Pickwick Club crash, will be closed at midnight on the following day, August 8, so there remains just one week in which to send in personal contributions.

A host of givers have sent in their bit so far—and some have sent considerable bits. But more is needed and there cannot be too much.

GIVE YOUR OLD CITY DIRECTORY TO LIBRARY

An unusual request was made today by the Boston Public Library. The 1924 City Directories from the principal cities of the United States are wanted to complete the library files and it is believed they can be secured from residents of Boston who have secured the 1925 directories and have no further need for the issues of last year.

Lack of funds prevents the library from purchasing the new directories but the old ones will meet the requirements. The library officials today announced they would call for old directories if notified by telephone. The Library 'phone number is Back Bay 8750.

SHENANDOAH PLACED IN HANGAR IN 22 MINUTES

Lakehurst, N. J., July 31 (A. NEW ENGLAND'S BOOMERS MEET AUGUST 11

Plans to Advance Interests of Section to Be Discussed by Ceneral Committee

Plans for concerted action in a campaign for the advancement of New England and New England interests were formulated at an all day meeting of the executive committee of the delegates appointed by the six New England governors, meeting in the office of its chairman, John S. Lawrence.

After all angles of the movement had received consideration it was decided to hold another meeting Tuesday evening, August 11. The final report of the General Committee will be offered for adoption August 12.

TO ELECT COUNCIL.

A general scheme of organization was tentatively laid out at the meeting in Chairman Lawrence's office. Methods of operation and membership admission also received consideration. It was generally agreed that an annual conference of New England business interests would be held each year in some New England city, at which every substantial agricultural, commercial and industrial organization would be represented. It is planned that at these gatherings New England problems will be publicly discussed.

At the conference it is planned to elect a New England Council of a dozen members from each State to further the plans and desires of the conference.

18 ON COMMITTEE.

It is the intent of the committees that those who join in the first conference shall be delegates from associations which shall be selected by each State delegation.

On the general committee as appointed by the governors there are eighteen members. That committee to which has been confided the duty of drawing up a general plan consists of one from each State. Those present at the meeting were: Guy Gannett, Portland, Me.; Albert E. Worcester, Manchester, N. H.; Frederick A. Howland, Montpelier, Vt.; John S. Lawrence, Boston; Henry D. Sharpe, Providence; and George B. Chandler, Hartford.

The sub-committee will report to the general committee on August 12.

NOEMI LODGE TO CONDUCT FIELD DAY

The annual field day of Noemi Lodge will be held Wednesday afternoon at Atlantic House on Green Hill, Nantasket. A luncheon and a bridge party will follow an athletic program.

Among those who will entertain the guests are Miss Bessie Cohen, Miss Helen Appleton and Miss Irma Lowenstein. Close to three hundred members and friends are expected.

August 5 will be celebrated as True Sisters' Day and observed nationally by the whole United Order of True Sisters. On that day Noemi Lodge will supply the Boston Floating Hospital with sufficient funds to pay for their entire milk supply for one day.

* * *

A bridge and mah jong party under the auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Mishkan Tefila was held with great success at the Summer home of Mrs. J. Falkson, Semoset avenue, Kenberma.

* * *

A distinct innovation has been inaugurated by the junior members of Junior Hadassah. Making picture books for the children of Palestine is their very newest pastime. In this way, they believe, they will have created an excellent method of teaching their Palestinian sisters and brothers the ideals of American Judaism.

TO EXAMINE IMMIGRANTS AT BRITISH ISLES PORTS

New York, July 31 (AP)—Immigrants from Great Britain and the Irish Free State arriving in third-class cabins at the port of New York will be permitted to debark at the piers instead of proceeding to Ellis Island for examination, providing they have been examined by the United States immigration inspectors and health doctors, newly stationed at points of embarkation, it is announced.

Inspectors and doctors assumed their duties July 20 at London, Southampton, Glasgow, Cork, Dublin, Cobh and Belfast, for an experimental period of three months.

NEWTON PASTOR QUITS TO TAKE MISSION POST

The Rev. Frank H. Page, D.D., pastor of the Congregational Church in Waltham, will resign to assume his duties as president of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, upon his return from his vacation in August. He will take his new office about November 1.

Dr. Page became pastor of the church in 1908, taking the position made vacant by the late Dr. Charles W. Harrington.

AMERICAN PRAISED FOR WINNING SLASH IN LIGHT RATES

PUBLIC LEADERS HAIL FIGHT AS BIG CIVIC ACHIEVEMENT

clared that it was absolutely impossible to reduce rates any more showing that but for the battle fought for the consumers by the Evening American there would have been no rate-cut now.

The saving to consumers in the area served by the Edison concern is more than $1,000,000 a year.

Besides criticizing the Edison dividend rate of 12 per cent., the Commission confirmed the contention of Attorney Hurlburt that the company was unduly favoring large consumers at the expense of householders, storekeepers and occupants of offices.

Three-fifths of the electricity sold by the company goes to consumers who pay only from 1.2 to 3 cents per kilowatt hour, the Commissioner points out.

The Commission, in his decision, also reaffirms Attorney Hurlburt's criticism of the company's high charges for advertising and for getting new business, expenses from which the great mass of consumers and the people who pay the highest rates derive no benefit.

INVESTMENT TOO HIGH

The Edison company's investment is entirely too high, the Commission declares, and compares the Edison rate of 3½ cents with the Worcester rate of 2½ cents, and the Cambridge rate of 2¼ cents.

The decision reads, in part:

"The high investment of the company is strikingly shown when we find that the capital employed by the company to produce a kilowatt of electricity is more than three times that of the company operating in Cambridge, more than two and one-half times that of the company in Springfield and over four times that of the company in Worcester.

"There is also food for thought in the fact that in Worcester and Cambridge, at least, the maximum rate is lower than that of the Edison company, that in Worcester being 2½ cents, while that in Cambridge is 2¼ cents.

"With the contention of counsel for the consumers that the rates which the great mass of consumers have been unduly low and made at the expense of those who pay the maximum rate, we, on the whole, are inclined to agree.

EXTRA RATE.

"The outstanding fact is that the Edison maximum rate at the present time is 3½ cents. This rate is higher than that charged in either Worcester or Cambridge where, in our judgment, the conditions under which the companies operate are more or less similar.

"It is certainly true that the company's investment cost is high, but that it is due to the reason advanced by the company we are not prepared to admit.

"No satisfactory evidence has been presented to us that the proportion of its system underground is materially larger than that in Worcester, Cambridge or Springfield. We believe that investigation would show that they do not materially vary.

"It may be that the Edison company suffers some disadvantage by reason of the population in parts of its area being less dense, but it must be borne in mind that the Edison Company has a distinct advantage in the matter of coal over companies not located on tidewater.

UNFAIR POLICY.

"We think that the facts indicate that the policy of the company of serving large customers at very low rates has resulted not only in forcing the company to maintain a high maximum rate to the householders but it has also tended to compel the company to continually expand its capital to meet the added necessities of its generating system.

"It is to be observed that the 'A rate' customers who pay the rate in issue contribute nearly one-half the revenue of the company and use but one-fifth of the electricity sold. Moreover, users of approximately three-fifths of the electricity sold pay prices averaging from 3 cents down to 1.2 cents per per kilowatt hour.

"The company's expenses in 1924 for new business, exclusive of advertising, $207,061.42, and for advertising, $274,000, impress us as large, particularly as the payers of the maximum rate receive slight, if any, benefit therefrom.

"Not sufficient evidence, in our judgment, has been introduced to warrant the conclusion that it is paying or has paid an excessive amount for coal.

"The company is now paying dividends at the rate of 12 per cent. upon the par value of its capital stock. Twelve per cent. is approximately 7.6 per cent. upon its capital stock and premiums paid thereon. Its stock is selling in the market for $200 a share which indicates that the public is willing to invest its money in the stock of the company when the return thereon is somewhat less than 4 per cent.

"A reduction in the dividend rate to 11 per cent. would yield approximately 6.9 per cent. upon the capital and premiums, and a reduction to 10 per cent. would yield about 6.3 per cent., which is a better rate than that which those who now buy the stock in the open market realize from their investment.

"We see no reason, when the public interest so requires, why high rates of dividends may not be reduced when it will not impair the company's ability readily to obtain new capital, and particularly when done to maintain an adequate provision for depreciation.

Proved Edison Light Not 'Sacred Thing'

"WHEN we attacked the Edison dividend rate of 12 per cent., we were told by scores of men that 'we couldn't get away with that.' Now the Public Utilities Commission has announced that the Edison dividend is not a sacred thing and that there is no reason why the dividend of a public utility company should continue to go up and up, and never come down.

"The Edison company was howling that it had to pay a 12 per cent. dividend in order to attract new capital for their extensions of plant, and so on, but the commission told them plainly that this was not true.

"This was only one of the points, but an important one, in which we were upheld by the Department of Public Utilities. The saving to householders, storekeepers and occupants of offices is more than $1,000,000 a year, and it increases every year as this class of customers increases."—Statement by Attorney Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr.

COOLIDGE SYMPATHIZES WITH BANCROFT'S BROTHER

Swampscott, July 31 (I.N.S.)—President Coolidge today sent to Dr. Frederick Bancroft in Washington a message of condolence over the death of his brother, Edgar A. Bancroft, American Ambassador to Japan.

Eulogizing the devoted and efficient services the late Ambassador had given to the United States, the President declared:

"His death deprives the foreign service of one who had demonstrated the fullest measure of equipment and had won the unqualified confidence of both his own government and that of the great empire to which he was a credit."

BRITAIN SCORNS FRENCH DEBT MISSION'S PLEAS

London, July 31 (I.N.S.)—The French debt experts are homeward bound today, ostensibly to report the British attitude, but really to report failure, according to the Daily Express.

The Express said the French representatives made no progress, submitted no offers which were acceptable to Great Britain and all in all failed in the parleys.

FRANCONIA IN STORM PASSES BOULOGNE BY

Cherbourg, France, July 31 (A.P.)—The liner Franconia landed 150 passengers here today after having been unable to touch at Boulogne because of a storm. The Franconia sailed from New York July 1 and has called at Reykjavik, Iceland, and Scandinavia.

WHAT PUBLIC OFFICIALS SAY OF VICTORY

Among the many compliments received by the Boston Evening American on its Edison rate fight victory are the following:

Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge: The Boston Evening American is to be commended for its great fight for reduction of electric light rates in Boston.

Michael H. Crowley, superintendent of police: I want to congratulate the Boston Evening American for the part it has played in securing the reduction of electric light rates. The electric light companies can well afford a reduction, and this is a fine victory that the Boston Evening American has won for the people.

City Registrar Edward W. McGlennen: That's great work. Every consumer of electricity in Boston should congratulate the Boston Evening American, the newspaper that performs public service.

City Councillor David J. Brickley: All praise to the Boston Evening American for its smashing victory over the Edison Corporation. That corporation could well afford, so I am told, to sell the people electricity for even a cent less than the new price. But that will come later. Meanwhile to the Boston Evening American alone should the credit be given.

City Councilor George F. Gibbons: At last someone has stopped the greedy electric lighting octopus from gouging the people further. It is very proper that the Boston Evening American should do it. The City Council has always been willing to assist this great and enterprising newspaper to do the public a service.

E. Mark Sullivan, Boston Corporation Counsel: This is the result of a long fight extending over a term of six years, and costing the City of Boston over $160,000. None of the other thirty cities and towns, whose citizens can now be benefitted by the efforts of the City of Boston, has been called upon to contribute to this very necessary expense. When the City of Boston started this fight for lower lighting rates, the rate charged this class of customers was, with the "coal clause" added, substantially eleven cents.

During the time that this fight has been carried on at the expense of the citizens of Boston, there have been several reductions in the rate charged by the lighting company to this class. A reduction of one cent meant an annual saving of approximately $1,00,000. The aggregate savings to this class of the Edison's customers, during the time that this fight has been in progress, is approximately $8,000,000.

The City of Boston and its Mayor, James M. Curley, acknowledge their debt of gratitude to the Boston Evening American, that has sustained the city in this long fight, not alone by the publicity that it has given to the proceedings before the Public Utilities Commission but by the active co-operation of its own counsel.

Charles L. Burrill, of the Governor's Council: It is a decision of far-reaching importance to the citizens of Metropolitan Boston. Any action that reduces the high cost of living benefits the people. The Boston Evening American is to be commended for its fight for a lower rate.

Charles Sotos, No. 33 Stuart street: It is a great thing to reduce the cost of our electric lights. The Boston Evening American should be warmly thanked for the great service it has rendered to the public of Boston and its environs.

Dr. David Johnson, Institutions Commissioner: The victory gained by the Boston Evening American in reducing the price of electricity to the consumer is a notable one and one that will save all the corporation's customers money. It is simply another victory added to the long list of achievements of the Boston Evening American for the people.

Representative William H. Winnett, Charlestown: The Boston Evening American is to be highly commended for showing the public interest that they have in the Edison matter. It has done a wonderful work.

Arthur J. Gibbs, Somerville business man: The Boston Evening American is to be commended for the work it has done in the Edison rate matter. It should continue its fight for a still lower rate.

ACTRESS' AUTO, DRIVEN BY TURFMAN, KILLS WOMAN

New York, July 31 (I.N.S.)—Charles C. Frey, prominent turfman, from Louisville, Ky., was at liberty today under $2,000 bail, following his arrest after the automobile he was driving struck and killed Mrs. Annie Beach, 19, of Woodside, N. Y. Frey was driving the private motor car of Wilda Bennett, musical comedy and motion picture star, who was in the car at the time. Frey is charged with technical homicide. Last May, Frey's wife brought suit against Miss Bennett charging alienation of her husband's affections.

Padlock Drive to Start Monday in New York

New York, July 31 (A. P.).—The greatest effort in the history of the local prohibition department to padlock resorts alleged to be violators of the dry laws and to bring to trial "men higher up" will be launched Monday, United States Attorney Buckner announced. Plans for the arraignment of 1,000 padlock cases before Federal Judge Hand next week have been perfected.

In the meantime "Bargain Week" continued its accelerating program in the padlock court before Judge Hand.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERER SHOOTS SELF AT LYNN

As a result of several months' suffering from an incurable case of sciatic rheumatism, Charles H. Weeks of No. 451 Broadway, Lynn, shot himself to death with a 32 calibre revolver. He was fifty-two years old.

ELECTRICAL LEAGUE OF HUB HOLDS OUTING

Marlboro, July 31.—The annual outing and field day of the Metropolitan Electrical League of Boston was held here at the grounds of the Black and White Club.

2 HOTEL THUGS ARE QUICKLY INDICTED

Chicago, July 31 (A.P.).—The spectacular daylight holdup of the fashionable Drake Hotel, in which two robbers and a hotel cashier were killed and two robbers captured, netted less than $3,000 to the fifth robber, who is still at large.

But the indictment of the three living robbers for murder and the launching of a concerted drive against criminals by the Chicago Bar Association were almost immediate results.

While Joseph Holmes and Jack Wilson, alias Woods, were examined by State alienists to forestall an insanity defense, and police sought William Nugent, who escaped with the loot, the Bar Association took steps against delays in bringing criminals to trial. The attorneys' organization appointed a group of four hundred of its members, the best legal minds in Chicago, to aid the State in prosecutions.

Holmes and Wilson were quickly indicted, arraigned and entered pleas of not guilty to killing Frank Rodkey, assistant hotel cashier. Both confessed their parts in the robbery.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaves the stomach sweet and free from gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent bottles, any drugstore.

SCOTCH CLANS IN BIG PICNIC TOMORROW

Boston Caledonia Club Announces Notable Program for 72nd Annual Affair

The Caledonia Grove in West Roxbury will be the Mecca tomorrow for Scotchmen from all parts of New England.

The occasion is the annual outing of the Boston Caledonia Club, the seventy-second annual outing the club has held.

There will be clansmen from New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine—in fact, every little hamlet throughout New England that can boast a clan will send representatives to the picnic.

Athletic events for both amateur and professional have made the affair of more than Clan interest in the past. Tomorrow's program is in keeping with the Caledonia traditions.

NEW SLASH IN BUDGET AIM OF COOLIDGE

President Coolidge and Representative Martin B. Madden, chairman of the appropriations committee, will confer at the Summer White House, Swampscott, today on plans to cut the next Federal budget to three billion dollars, the first time it will have reached that low level since the war. Madden is now en route from Chicago.

The government's budget for the year, exclusive of the postal department, is $3,875,000,000. But in his recent budget speech, President Coolidge ordered all department heads to save at least $125,000,000 of that amount.

NEW $250,000,000 SLASH.

Within the next twenty-four hours the President and Madden will effect plans by which they will be able to slash an additional $250,000,000 in the next Congress and bring the government's expenses down to the three billion goal which is the President's ambition.

Senator Deneen left White Court after a two days' visit with President and Mrs. Coolidge. He said the next Senate will ratify a world court plan. He declined to say what reservations he will support.

The President is today in search of a man of skill who will be able to strengthen the relations between Japan and the United States.

The death of Ambassador E. A. Bancroft presents the President with the most difficult vacancy to be filled in the diplomatic service. Announcement was made that he will take his time in finding a new Ambassador to Tokyo.

REAL DIPLOMAT NEEDED.

The official diplomatic relations between the two countries are notably harmonious, the officials here are informed that the situation needs a diplomat who can compose the Japanese state of public mind toward the United States.

The Japanese exclusion act caused resentment there. The present naval demonstration in Pacific waters aroused some anger. Senator Hale's demand for the establishment of a new and powerful naval base on the California coast and Secretary Wilbur's decision to make San Diego the base of the lighter-than-air forces are regarded as certain to attract unfavorable comment in Japan.

In all his state papers affecting the Orient President Coolidge has shown a marked desire for friendly relations among all the nations "looking out into the Pacific."

JOHN COOLIDGE GREETS HUB BELLBOY FRIEND

Henry Smith, for twenty years a bellboy at the Adams House, had a visit from an old friend, who used to stay at that hotel in the days when his father was in the Legislature, and later.

"He gave me a great handshake," said Henry. "It was John Coolidge up from Swampscott for an afternoon in town. He had a chap with him in soldier uniform. It was quite a big husky chap. I guess it was his body guard. He said he was tickled to be in the Adams House again; it seemed like being home to him."

WANT VET NAMED ON CIVIL SERVICE BOARD

An appeal to appoint a disabled war veteran to the vacancy as United States civil service commissioner caused by the death of Mrs. Helen Gardener was received by President Coolidge at Swampscott by telegram from John W. Mahan of Montana, commander of the National Association of Disabled Veterans. Mahan said that any disabled veteran selected by the President will be satisfactory to the association.

MARRIAGES FALLING OFF IN CAMBRIDGE

There were 111 fewer licenses issued this year than last, reports Miss Nellie Buckley, clerk in the Cambridge marriage license bureau.

From January 1 to July 30, 1924, 812 couple received permission to join in wedlock. This year the number was 801.

MOTHER OF TWO IS SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

PAN-AMERICAN PACT AGAINST WAR URGED

Dr. Leo S. Rowe Speaks at Institute of Politics at Williams

Williamstown, July 31 (A.P.)—There is need for a constructive Pan-American policy based upon a convention already drafted by the American Institute of International Law, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, said in an address today at an Institute of Politics Round Table conference.

The drafted convention, to be submitted to the International Commission of Jurists at its meeting in Rio Janeiro in August, 1926, provides against territorial acquiston by war or threats of war, refuses o recognize title to territory so acquired and such acquisition in future shall be considered null and void.

"There would not be the slightest difficulty," Dr. Rowe said, "in the United States giving its assent to these principles. Successive presidents and secretaries of State have time and again during the past twenty-five years committed the government t othis policy.

"Combined with the general doctrine of no aggression there must be general acceptance of the principles of arbitration of all inter-American disputes."

GENERAL ELECTRIC CUTS ITS DEBT $79,000,000

When the General Electric Co. on Sept. 1 next redeems its $15,136,500 5 per cent. bonds of 1952, the company in less than five years will have reduced its bond and note indebtedness from $81,000,000 to $2,000,000, or 97½ per cent. On Dec. 31, 1920, notes outstanding approximated $46,000,000 and bonds $35,000,000. After the Sept. 1 redemption the bonded debt will consist of only $2,047,000 3½ per cent. bonds, 1942, and there will be no notes outstanding; in fact, not since the statement of Dec. 31, 1920, has any General Electric balance sheet disclosed a notes payable account.

GEM THIEF NAMED BY KATHERYN RAY

Kathryn Ray, known as "The Pendulum Girl" of "The Vanities," who has taken out a warrant for the man she accuses of stealing her jewels.

New York, July 31.—Katheryn Ray, in Earl Carroll's "Vanities," appeared in West Side Court accompanied by a small army of theatrical managers, publicity agents, reporters and photographers, and obtained a warrant for Louis Richards, employed backstage when the "Vanities" was at the Music Box last October.

The warrant was issued after Richards had been arrested in Syracuse.

DISAPPEARED WITH JEWELS.

Miss Ray charges he disappeared with $3,500 worth of her jewels and $2,000 worth of watches, belonging to the vaudeville team of Roms and Dunn.

Miss Ray told the magistrate the "Vanities" girls always entrusted their jewels to Richards when they went on for their turns. It was Richards' wont to stand in the wings with the girls' jewels, returning them as the girls left the stage for the dressing rooms.

On the night of October 22, she said, as she was about to go on, she entrusted to Richard's keeping two diamond-studded bracelets, a three-carat diamond ring and $155.

RECOGNIZED BY AN ACTOR.

She alleges he disappeared with the money and jewels, and also took two watches from Roms and Dunn, valued at $2,000.

Since then, the police of several cities had sought Richards. He was recognized Tuesday night in Syracuse by A. Gamble, an actor, formerly of the "Vanities," who caused his arrest.

Police headquarters here were immediately notified and Miss Ray then sought the warrant.

Detectives left for Syracuse, to bring Richards back to New York.

SOMERVILLE POLICE RUM SQUAD IS SHAKEN UP

A change has been made in the Somerville police liquor squad, with Patrolman Augustine F. Sharry and Patrick J. Lyons assigned to plain clothes duty, replacing Patrolmen James A. Fitzpatrick and Joseph P. Blake, assigned to street duty in uniform. Sharry has been night officer on lower Broadway and the "Nannery section" for several years and recently on sick leave, while Patrolman Lyons has been night officer in "Brickbottom." They have performed good work in their seven months on the rum squad, but it was decided new faces were needed on the job. Sergeant William G. Kenney will remain in charge of the squad assisted by Patrolman Allan S. Burns.

PUBLIC EXHIBITION WILL MARK SCHOOL'S CLOSE

The Church Vacation School, in which the Protestant churches of Charlestown have been co-operating, will close this evening with a free public exhibition in the vestry of the First Baptist Church at Lawrence and Austin streets, Charlestown. There will be an interesting program beginning at 7:30, by the children of both divisions of the school. Their handiwork will be displayed to their parents and friends. The two sections of the school have been held in St. John's Episcopal and the First Baptist churches.

$200,000 LOSS BY FIRE IN ATLANTA, GA.

Atlanta, July 31 (A.P.)—Originating in the rear of a cafe shortly before midnight, flames swept through almost half a block of the downtown business district. The damage was estimated to be more than $200,000. A manufacturing plant, an art goods store, a furniture establishment, a manufacturing plant, a feed store, a pet shop and a barber shop were damaged.

WEATHER FORCES DOWN PLANE ON NIGHT FLIGHT

Chicago, July 31 (A.P.)—The six army pursuit planes attempting a Cheyenne-Chicago night flight, which left Omaha at 3:50 a. m., central standard time, were forced down by unfavorable weather at the Cordovx, Ill., emergency air mail landing field.

Major Thomas J. Lamphier, commander of the group, said they would remain there until the weather lifted.

CAILLAUX HERE IN PERSON, IS U. S. DESIRE

Government Wants Someone Who Has Authority to Commit France

Washington, July 31 (I.N.S.).—The American Government is keenly desirous that Joseph Caillaux, the French Finance Minister, shall come to Washington in person next month to negotiate the funding of France's $4,000,000,000 war debt and to find end discreet hints are being dropped in Paris.

This became known oday on the heels of the apparent collapse of the Anglo-French debt negotiations at London.

There is undisguised fear here that the same fate may overtake the Franco-American negotiations unless the French negotiations are headed by someone who has authority to commit the French government to a settlement.

Treasury officials do not relish the idea of carrying on extended negotiations in Washington with French representatives who have not the authority to say what France can pay and when she can pay. They have already had considerable experience with this kind of negotiation, first with the Parmentier mission, three years ago, and later with Ambassadors Jusserand and Daeschner, successively.

The failure of the London negotiations to find a suitable basis for funding France's debt to Great Britain aroused keen interest today among members of the American Debt Funding Commission, but owing to the delicacy of the situation and the imminence of negotiations here all comment was withheld.

What the American negotiators want is a true cross-section picture of commercial and economic conditions in each country, compiled from American sources of information.

"LOUIE THE SPIDER" TO BARE PICKFORD PLOT

Los Angeles, July 31 (A.P.).—Details of the plot to kidnap Mary Pickford were contained in confessions prepared for submission to the Superior Court today at the trial of Adrian Wood, Charles Stephens and Claude Holcomb on charges of attempting to kidnap Mary.

Attorneys for the defense lost their final motion to exclude the confessions.

There was some doubt as to whether the State's so-called star witness, Louis Geck, known also as "Louie the Spider," would be called today to tell how he "sat in" with the defendants and heard them discuss the best way to go about seizing Miss Pickford and collecting $200,000 ransom from Douglas Fairbanks.

NIP TIBET REVOLT ON RULE OF ANCIENT MONKS

London, July 31 (A.P.).—Civil war is reported to have broken out in Tibet, land of the Lamas, Tibet, in special dispatches from Calcutta.

The situation developed through a plot by military officers who had been trained abroad and imbibed western ideas, against the ancient rules of priesthood under the heads of the Lamaist Church of Tibetan Buddhism. The officers plotted to overthrow Lamaism and attempted to make war on the Sens and Gratpa monasteries, strongholds of the Lamaist monks.

The plot was discovered and the Tibetan commander-in-chief was degraded and replaced by Draxs Drumpa, a relative of the Dalai Lama, spiritual head of the country.

PLAN DEPORTATION OF MILLIONAIRE BOOTLEGGER

Atlanta, Ga., July 31 (A. P.).—The Atlanta Constitution says that Federal authorities in Atlanta, Cincinnati and Chicago are investigating the citizenship record of Georgs Remus, millionaire Cincinnati bootlegger, it was learned here today.

When he completes his present prison term.

SNAPPING COLLIE DOG SHOT BY PATROLMAN

A collie dog acting strangely in the vicinity of No. 37A Medford street, Somerville, barking and snapping at occupants of the house and pedestrians along the street, was shot by Patrolman Peter Moore. The actions of the canine aroused the neighbors who telephoned to police headquarters and Officer Moore was sent to the scene and quickly ended the dog's existence.

GOV. FULLER IS DEFENDING HIS LAWN

The more or less historic colloquy between the Governor of North Carolina and the Governor of South Caroling threatens to pale into insignificance in comparison with the conversation Governor Fuller of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is scheduled to have with the Governor of New Hampshire next Wednesday.

The Governor of Massachusetts and a score or more of other residents of the Bay State have established Summer homes in the vicinity of Portsmouth, N. H.

Governor Fuller is going to talk to the New Hampshire Governor about a ruling of the District Highway Commissioners of Boar's Head that the "no parking" signs placed about the estates of the Governor of Massachusetts and his neighbors are illegal.

This means that the auto tourists from 47 other States may park their cars on the governor's lawn. They may eat their lunch and deposit their refuse on the well-kept grounds of the Governor and his neighbors.

A red hot letter from Chairman William F. Fowler of the local commission declared the action of the State highway department is jeopardizing the district as a Summer colony, that Governor Fuller, Mrs. Melville French of Manchester and other Summer residents pay $20,000 yearly to the State in taxes and half the town's taxes, and that if the touring public is allowed to park on their lawns and before their homes, the colony will be destroyed.

Now the two Governors will meet and it is predicted that the signs will be replaced.

WITHDRAW EVOLUTION SUIT AT WASHINGTON

Washington, July 31 (A.P.)—Washington's evolution suit was withdrawn by the attorneys of Loren H. Wittner, the government clerk who filed it. At the same time the lawyers said they would draw up another complaint, more free of objections and probably would name another man with Wittner as a plaintiff.

MIMIC BATTLE FEATURED AT DEVENS

Hub Youths in Training Have First Taste of Real Action

Camp Devens, July 31.—Boys from Boston and vicinity, the vanguard of the 1700 students from New England states coming here for the "Cit Army," ran into a regular war.

Like a thousand military salutes to the flower of the nation—the men of tomorrow—hoarse artillery pieces blazed away, the din of mimic battle punctuated by bursting of shrapnel and high explosive shells.

Batteries A, B and C of the First Battalion Field Artillery, M. N. G., Boston units, were engaged with French 75's under Maj. Charles L. Furber at 2800 and 3600 yard targets. Batteries E of Brockton, D of New Bedford and F of Taunton hiked to Groton. They are to return Saturday. All the artillery units will be in top-notch form when reviewed by Gov. Fuller next Wednesday.

John J. Sheehan, Jr., No. 225 Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, was the first of the "Young America" contingent to arrive. He is a member of Co. F., 101st Infantry, which broke camp Saturday. But Sheehan remained for the Citizens' Military Training Camp.

John V. Nee, No. 194 C street, South Boston, and Arthur Bibby, No. 7 Dixon pl., Somerville, both "camp sophomores," were the first to arrive by road. Nee is a trooper in the 110th Cavalry, M. N. G., and had just returned with his troop from Rhode Island. Bibby is a Somerville high school boy.

Taste the Difference

We've been told that we use too good materials—take too many precautions for purity—in other words, "fuss" too much about the way our ice cream is made. Maybe we do. But that's the reason you can taste the difference. For there is a difference in a cream that gets the testing, the purifying, the "stuffing" with good things that Jersey Ice Cream gets.

We could make a cheaper ice cream. But we believe quality is better than quantity.

That's why Jersey Ice Cream is known as New England's standard.

Serve it and you please all.

Mexican Who Killed Policeman Commuted After Plea to 'Ma' Ferguson

Huntsville, Tex., July 31 (A.P.)—The death sentence of Anulfo Valles, who was to have been executed at the State penitentiary here today for the murder of an El Paso policeman, was commuted to life imprisonment, it was announced at the warden's office.

The warden could supply no information as to when or why the commutation was granted. Word had come from Austin that Governor Ferguson had officially said she would not interfere with the scheduled execution. The board of pardons had acted adversely on Valles' commutation application.

Valles, a twenty-one-year-old Mexican, made a personal plea to the Governor yesterday in a message in which he asserted his innocence and requested a commutation of sentence.

The policeman, Enrique Rivera, was killed in November of 1923.

Many Bids for Money in Dead Letter Office

Washington, July 31 (A. P.)—There's more than one person who thinks the dead letter office is a charitable or philanthropic institution.

Ever since a man in Wisconsin wrote the Postoffice Department for a mere $60,000 of the undelivered funds in the dead letter office here, there has been a steady stream of similar "gimme" letters, many from women, and all advancing what the senders claim are good reasons why they should share in the "dead" cash.

Postoffice officials attribute the many requests to omission in news dispatches describing the Wisconsin letter of the fact that dead letter money must be held a year and then turned over to the Treasury.

CLUBMAN HELD IN DEATH OF GIRL OF 19

New York, July 31 (A.P.)—Charles C. Frey, a clubman, whose wife is suing Wilda Bennett, musical comery star, for $100,000 for alienation of affections, was out on bail today on a technical charge of homicide for killing a girl while driving Miss Bennett's automobile.

Miss Bennett and Albert Barringer, an advertising man of Asbury Park, N. J., who were in the car, were not held. Both Frey and the actress gave their addresses as Elm Point, Great Neck, L. I.

The automobile hit a motorcycle in the Bronx yesterday. Miss Anna Bench, nineteen, was thrown to the pavement from the sidecar and died in a hospital. Her fiance, Charles Bielganini, who was driving, escaped with bruises.

OBSERVE OLD HOME DAY AT MEREDITH

Meredith, N. H., July 31.—The annual "Old Home" day celebration here brought back natives of the town from all parts of the country. An elaborate program marked the day, starting with a parade of horribles this morning, and concluding with a big vaudeville show tonight.

U. S. TO PROBE SHARP RISE IN WHEAT

Decision of State Utilities Board Anticipated by General Public

Chicago, July 31 (A.P.)—An effort will be made by Dr. J. T. Duvel, government grain futures administrator here, to determine the extent of interests behind the recent sharp rise in July wheat.

He has issued a call for a report of trades in this class of grain, with the individual names, and from it will determine his action. He believes that there is nothing serious in the situation, however.

Complaints made to the Board of Trade that a corner exists in July wheat caused the calling of a special meeting of its directorate to consider the situation, but President F. L. Carey declined to make a statement.

July wheat closed yesterday at $1.57, a gain of only a half cent after rises of three cents and upwards on Tuesday and Wednesday.

BARBERS TO MEET SUNDAY MORNING

A special meeting for the barbers of Greater Boston has been called for Sunday morning, to be held at No. 887 Washington street. Questions affecting the interests of the barber business will be discussed by the speakers, and it is expected at this meeting the new demands relating to working conditions will be recommended and adopted by this organization, which in turn will present the results to the boss barbers for acceptance.

1,400 GET EXTRA WORKING DAY IN MALDEN

The Boston Rubber Shoe Company, with factories in Malden and Melrose, employing about 1,400 people, has increased its working schedule from four to five days a week and reports orders on hand to keep the wheels turning for some months to come.

The Converse Rubber Co. of Malden, employing 1,500, is operating a full week and will have no shutdown in the tire division this year.

MAN OF 75 SHOT THREE TIMES AND ROBBED

Burlington, Vt., July 31 (A.P.)—Newell E. Clifford, seventy-five years old, was robbed and shot as he went to his porch in answer to the ringing of the doorbell. Although three bullets took effect, the man is expected, by attending physicians, to recover.

work. That's more than you can say for this country.

THE UNITED STATES some day may get a fearful lesson through the air. The blow would strike the East coast first, probably, destroying the Panama Canal, the locks, as a preliminary. It may be noted to teach this nation, its rich men afraid of taxation, dull-minded, uninformed "statesmen," sloppy pacificists and tender missionaries, with their sympathetic tales of "kind-hearted" Asia, that you can't win wars or protect yourself with sentiment, or "how-I-love-my-brother" buncombe.

INTELLIGENT PEOPLE on the Pacific Coast should not wait for a sluggish government to wake up after one or two American cities shall have been wrecked and ransomed. The West Coast should have its own protection in the form of a great interstate flying militia, self-supporting in peace, carrying passengers and perishable products, ready in war.

FOR EVERY flying ship built in Asia, the West Coast should build two; for every fast flier built the West should build one faster. For every well trained Asiatic flier the West should have two. It has the young men of courage, it has the money.

AND WHAT the West Coast does to maintain control of the air above outside of the Pacific Ocean, the Eastern States should do equalling and surpassing all the European flying machine program to insure control in the air above our side of the Atlantic.

ONE-HALF of the money that excited patriotic fools squandered and that rascals stole in our war excitement, building ships that never went to sea, and flying ships that never flew, would do away with all danger of war in this country.

TAXI RATE WAR IS LOOMING IN BOSTON

Independent Companies Plan Reduction in Fares; Meeting Called

A new taxicab rate war looms in Boston.

Independent taxicab companies have combined and at a meeting scheduled for next Monday night they are expected to throw down the gauntlet to the big companies that operate throughout Greater Boston.

The owners of the small taxicab lines have combined in an organization known as the Independent Taxi Operators' Association and their efficiency experts have informed them that they can profitably operate their cabs at 25 per cent. less than the present taxicab rates.

At the present time, when the flag is lowered on a taxicab the initial charge registered is 20 cents. The Independent taxicab operators believe this charge can be reduced to 15 cents and they believe the additional business the lower rate will bring will enable them to compete successfully with the so-called "taxi trust."

Bernard Russell is at the head of the movement agitated by the independent taxicab owners.

Recently a rate war between the leading taxicab companies resulted in a general reduction in rates and it is anticipated that the present agitation will result in still further reductions.

Home Brew Goes Off With Bang in Car

An innocent-looking package carried by a young woman of demure demeanor furnished an exciting few moments for passengers on a Dudley street car traveling from Massachusetts and Huntington avenues.

The lady in question entered the car and placed an ordinary-looking package by her side. The package was bound with a newspaper.

Scarcely was she seated when there came a loud report and a deluge of aromatic liquid descended upon those seated near the lady.

AFTER SUSPECT IN HI-JACKER MURDER

Boston Police on Way to Vancouver to Bring Back Raefalo De Pasquale

Boston police inspectors left today for Vancouver, B. C., to bring back Raefalo DePasquale, wanted in connection with the slaying of John B. Girouard, wealthy Marlboro ice dealer, who was shot down near his home on August 13, 1923.

Girouard was the victim of the warfare conducted by Boston bootleggers and hi-jackers.

He came to the scene as five men were holding up two trucksloads of liquor. Three men transporting the liquor were bound hand and foot and robbed of $2,000. It was a rum-runners' deal in which the men proved hi-jackers.

Fearing that their plans were being upset by the appearance of Girouard, he was shot down in cold blood.

Hugo Baldi and Bernardo Martino were arrested. The former was sentenced to five years in State prison for robbery, the latter a similar term for being an accessory.

The others escaped.

80,000 SEE 'TATTOO' FOR AMERICAN FLEET

Sydney, N. S. W., July 31 (A.P.)—Admiral Robison, commander-in-chief of the American fleet, viewed the grand military "tattoo" at the royal agricultural grounds held in honor of the visiting fleet. Some 80,000 persons saw the spectacle.

The admiral then left for Kosciusko to attend a three-day snow carnival.

SWEARS MORSE SAID LOTTA HAD CHILD

Testimony of a nurse, formerly employed by the late William A. Morse, Lotta Crabtree's attorney, featured the hearing in Suffolk Probate Court today where, by special permission of the court, attorneys for Mrs. Ida M. Blankenburg, claimant to the $3,000,000 Crabtree estate, put on a last-minute witness instead of beginning their closing argument.

The nurse, Miss Cora M. Lane, of No. 1699 Washington street, Roxbury, declared that Attorney Morse told her that a Mrs. Ida M. Blankenburg was Lotta Crabtree's daughter.

Mrs. Blankenburg's claim to the estate is based on her story that she is the daughter of the famous Boston actress, who left her property to World War veterans and charity, without mentioning a child.

MORSE ADMINISTRATOR.

Attorney Morse was named an administrator of the Crabtree estate, but he died shortly after Lotta did.

"I attended Attorney William A. Morse and Mrs. Morse in 1923 and 1924," said Mis Lane. "Everywhere Mr. Morse went, during one period, I accompanied him, and twice I went out with him and Lotta Crabtree.

"The second time, Mr. Morse sat in the rear seat of the automobile between Lotta and me. Lotta turned to him and said: 'I have just received two letters from my little girl, Ida. I want you to read them.'

"Mr. Morse said, 'Let me have them.' He put the letters in his wallet. When we got back home that evening Mr. Morse sat down in the library to read the letters.

"The telephone rang and I answered it. It was for Mr. Morse and I called him. He went to the telephone, taking the letters with him, but leaving the envelopes on the table.

"I wasn't exactly curious but I had nothing to do there and I glanced at the envelopes. They were addresses to Lotta Crabtree.

"On the back flap of one of the envelopes I saw a return address. It was 'Mrs. Ida M. Blankenburg.'"

"I remember the names well because I associated it at that time with the name of an old friend, Ida May Blankenburn. When Mr. Morse came back he finished reading the letters and looked very grave.

"Isn't it strange," said Mr. Morse, "the writer of these letters is the daughter of Lotta Crabtree, but doesn't know it."

FINDS HER HUSBAND, GONE 8 DAYS

Mrs. Charles Grafton, who again is happy in her home, No. 72 Belmont street, after she had been bowed by grief for her missing husband and worry over what would happen to her two children. Mr. Grafton has been found wandering the streets, a victim of amnesia.

WOMAN'S 'MIND EYE' IDENTIFIES MISSING MAN

Sees Him in Street and Tips Off His Wife, Who Takes Grafton Back Home

The memory of a South End woman for faces returned to his home Charles Grafton, twenty-eight, father of two children, after he had been missing for eight days.

Grafton, who disappeared on July 22, said today that he is sure amnesia led his steps away from No. 72 Belmont street, where he lives with his wife and children.

The father vanished from home on the same day he is reported to have asked his employer for a raise in wages and to have been refused. A search was conducted for him without avail.

A woman living in West Brookline street, South End, location of the Grafton home before moving to Watertown, saw the missing man in that street and recognized him instantly.

Knowing he had been reported missing she notified his wife and Grafton was taken home. He said today he could not trace his movements since vanishing.

Walks 177 Miles to Enlist; Told Feet Are Flat

New York, July 31 (A. P.).—After tramping 177 miles from Fall River, Mass., to join the army, Edward Langfield, 19 years old, was rejected because of flat feet.

DECLARES "DEVIL" MADE HIM SET CHURCH FIRE

Washington, July 31 (A.P.).—"The devil made me do it." This, according to the police, was the reason assigned by William Woods, thirty-three, a former watchman, for setting fire to the Shiloah Baptist Church.

U. S. PROBE IN CRASH THAT HURT 17

Boston-Portland Bus-Car Collision Victims Seen by Investigators

Biddeford, Me., July 31.—Federal and State officials today began a sweeping investigation of the crash of a Boston-Portland motor bus and a Biddeford-Portland trolley car in which seventeen persons were injured.

The motor bus was engaged in inter-State traffic, which brings the accident under the jurisdiction of Washington. Federal investigators arrived here today and began securing statements from those in the crash as well as those who witnessed the head-on collision of the two vehicles.

Four of the injured are still in Webber hospital. Sixteen of those hurt were passengers on the bus. The other was the motorman of the trolley car, Charles Rhoades of this city, who suffered fractured ribs.

Henry Herlihy of Newton, Mass., driver of the bus, who was not injured, told police that he had turned to avoid another car as he was climbing the hill and was unable to avoid the street-car. He was arrested and held for reckless driving.

The most seriously injured and still under hospital care were:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burns of 869 Center street, Boston; Mrs. Nellie Kirkup of Portland and Mrs. L. Gudop of New York city. All were bruised and cut.

The motor coach was owned by the Gray Bus Line of Boston. It was virtually wrecked, the front part being stove in and many of the windows broken. The trolley car was so damaged that it was towed to the barns for repairs.

Melrose Citizen Pays Before Tax Is Announced

City Collector William A. Carrie of Melrose, who was recently complimented by State officials for promptly collecting that city's taxes, bids fair to break all previous records this year. Osgood H. Tarr of No. 17 Adams street appeared at the collector's office and asked for his current tax bill. As the tax rate has not yet been announced and no bills sent out, Mr. Carrie was unable to oblige him, whereupon Mr. Tarr approximated what the tax would be and left funds sufficiently large to cover the bill, requesting the balance be returned after the bills are issued.

The RED LACQUER CASE

by PATRICIA WENTWORTH

A Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure, Mystery and Intrigue That Every-One Will Want to Read

SALLY MEREDITH, nervy niece of
M. FREDERICK LASALLE, war gas inventor, is intrusted with the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the formula sought by spies of rival governments. That night the red lacquer case is stolen and Lasalle mysteriously disappears. The case is so constructed that the formula is destroyed by one not in the secret.
MAJOR BILL ARMITAGE, seven years previously the sweetheart of Sally, appears in search of Lasalle. Unexpected meeting renews acquaintance, but Sally is coy.
DETECTIVE WILLIAMS enter the mystery and takes up the trail of the stolen case.
ETTA SHAW, once friend of Sally, lures the girl to London. She is made a prisoner by Lazare, the Goggled Terror. Lazare attempts to terririze Sally, but fails. Sally's jailers learn from spies that Bill is coming to search Etta's house, the prison. Etta pretends to let Sally escape so that they may recapture her when Bill goes. Bill finds Lasalle.
Read on and enjoy this wonderful story of love and mystery.

AFTER Sally had shrieked for help when Nadine took down the telephone she fainted. Her hope was that someone in the central station might hear. She was in despair when she heard that a "foreign gentleman," probably Le Noir, was on the telephone. Her bold move had gone for naught.

When Lazare, following her scream, threatened her

She looked up at him as if she did not understand. They had carried her at the foot of the stairs and propped her up with cushions. Her gaze rested blankly on him. She said nothing.

He took her by both wrists and, pulling her up, held her there at arm's length facing him.

"Now we come to business. Understand me. If you foot again or shall bring you round with a red hot iron. It is a fine restorative. But you will not faint. I think you have enough sense for that. You will come into the dining room and you will open the case which as you see, Nadine has taken from your pocket."

Sally looked him straight in the

"I won't do anything until I have talked to Major Armitage. I won't talk to him. I won't do anything unless you let him speak to me."

"And if we let you?" Lazare's eyes searched her face.

"I will tell you when we have talked."

"And why should we allow this interview?"

"Because," said Sally. "I won't do anything at all without it. I don't really care much either way. I don't care what you do, or what I do. You've pushed me too far, and I don't care. It's just as you like."

She wavered on her feet, and he let go her hands and saw her grope her way back to the pile of cushions and sink down there. He went over to Nadine, and they spoke together in Russian.

After a minute he addressed Sally. "Very well, we shall let you have this interview. Major Armitage I think you are really an intelligent man when you are not blinded by passion as you were just now. There are two points which I would recommend to your intelligence. If some quite close and sinister a low insinuating voice others. "In the first place, if Miss Sally does not open the case that is what we shall do to her." His voice sank lower still, but Bill could hear every "Now, Major Armitage," said Lazare. "You have your chance ... advise you to compose it to advantage. It will not be offered to you ... gain. He went over to the door, and on the threshold turned for a last word. "Of course, if you like, you can make a noise, call, shout, ...ang on the shutters, par exemple—but I really do not advise you."

'INSTRUCTORS' BOOM SALES OF INSURANCE

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

Alice H. Grady, deputy commissioner of Savings Bank Life Insurance at the State House, in the Boston Sunday Advertiser:

"The State employs two instructors who devote their entire time to explaining the merits of the Savings Bank Life Insurance to the wage earning portion of the people. One of these men receives a salary from the State of $2,100 annually and the other $2,520 annually. During the period of organization, which ended October 31, 1924, one of these men wrote $1,281,750 of insured business and the other $ 6,220,000 of insured business. Now, as to what they are doing, I shall use round numbers, as of the end of the year of Savings Bank Life Insurance.

"Their first task," Miss Grady explained, "was to interest a sufficient number of the population to warrant the establishment of agencies and then to train agents made for meeting the applicants in groups and these agents met the applicants individually in their homes. Those who desire to apply for the policies are examined by physicians appointed by the banks. The examination is made by the State Medical Examiner and physicians who have been appointed by the banks. Arrangements are made for meeting the applicants in groups and these agents meet course of action. Gregor will be outside the door with a pistol. If there is a sound, he will simply walk in and shoot, so I do not advise it. And now I will leave you to your interview."

He went out. Gregor followed. The door was shut. The bolts went home with a click. Bill and Sally were alone.

* * *

When Major Armitage's car tore by in the darkness Inspector Williams was very much annoyed. He did not know whose car it was. His attempt to catch sight of the number failed, and his indignation was still hot when he rode into Ledlington.

He got off his bicycle and spoke to the first policeman he met.

"Did a two-seater pass you here about ten minutes ago? I couldn't see the make or get the number, but he nearly did me in about a mile down the road. He must have been doing forty."

"There was a Hillman went out of here at a fair bat. I took the number."

"That would be him."

The policeman pulled out a notebook, wet his fingers, turned three pages laboriously and read out a number which, as the inspector himself afterward stated, brought him up with a round turn.

"Read it again," he said. And then: "You're sure of that?"

"Took it down as he went past. I tried to stop him and he took no more notice than if I'd been a-kissing my 'and. Dangerous driving, I says, and took his number."

Inspector Williams stood in the high road, a most astonished man. The number was that of Major Armitage's car. What had happened to take that car back to Charnwood at a tearing, law-breaking pace?

He began to walk along, wheeling his bicycle. Major Armitage should have been dining in London by now, but obviously something had occurred to alter his plans and send him in a furious hurry back along the road which he had just traversed. The more the Inspector thought about it the less he liked it. It was an odd case all through, positively no evidence, but the feeling of something fishy at every turn.

He walked along very thoughtfully for a while, but turned in to the "King's Arms," where he ate cold beef and pickles and continued to think.

About half an hour later he entered the police station and, after a short conversation with the local inspector, went to the telephone and looked up Miss Shaw's number. It was in his mind that he would like to speak to Miss Etta Shaw. He gave the number to the exchange and waited, not very sure of what he was going to say.

There was a pause. The hum of the traffic came in from the street outside. Then came the little click that told of the receiver being taken off at the other end, and immediately upon that, thin and faint, a woman's voice—a scream of "Help! Help!" The second word, the second scream, was cut short. Someone at the other end had been concerned to cut it short. Another click, and the receiver was in its place again.

Inspector Williams lost no time. He called the exchange and began to give rapid orders.

"This is the police station. If the number that has just cut me off rings you and asks who was calling, you say that it was a London call, and that the gentleman who spoke seemed to be a foreigner. You quite understand? It's a police matter."

The girl at the exchange experienced a delightful thrill.

Inspector Williams rang off, and turned back into the room, his usually wooden face full of anxiety.

"What's up?" said the local inspector.

"I don't know. There was a woman screaming at the other end. I must go back at once, and it's not a job I want to tackle alone. How many men can you give me?"

"Well, I don't know."

The local inspector was the embodiment of solid worth. One felt at a glance that it was worth and not blame that had made an inspector of him. His name was Mossapuddle, and irreverent constables spoke of him as Old Mossy Face.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "There's Jones just coming off his beat, and Bolster just a-going on his, and Webbing ought to be here, and—let me see." He continued to think aloud until he arrived at the conclusion that four men might be available. Eventually the four proved to be three.

Inspector Williams stood by, chafing inwardly. He could not get the sound of those faint screams out of his ears.

It was with immense relief that he stepped into the car which he had ordered, saw his reinforcements bundle in after him, one man in front by the driver, and for the third time that day set out towards Charnwood. He hoped very much that they would not be too late.

They ran down from the crossways, going slow and without lights, and drew up a couple of hundred yards short of the house. The door in the wall was shut and barred. It was not part of the Inspector's plan to ring the bell. He gave a low-voiced order, and one stout constable made a back, and one by one the others scrambled over the wall. The Inspector came last, and helped to haul the stout Bolster up. When they were all over there was a moment's uncertainty.

"Better go round to the back, one of you—yes, you, Webbing. The path runs round the house. Keep on the grass and go quietly."

Webbing went, and for a brief space the Inspector watched the house. The upper window was lighted and a faint gleam came from windows on the ground floor which he knew to be shuttered windows of the dining room in which he had interviewed Lenara. The hall door of solid oak was shut and showed nothing. As he waited for the moment of indecision to pass, the hall door was suddenly violently flung open, showing the lighted space within, a man's figure stood out for an instant against the glowing background, Sascha's hands were pressed to his head, he halted for just a second, and then came stumbling down the step and away from the house, and as he came he groaned aloud:

"Sally, Sally! 'Oh, mon Dieu, Sally! They killed her!"

The moment of indecision was past. Inspector Williams ran up the path and into the hall, followed by the Ledlington constables. As they crossed the threshold there came from the room on the left the sound of voices, the sound of running feet, two shots in rapid succession followed by a crash and a loud and piercing scream.

Are You My Ancestor?

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

SHERRY'S mind is a cross-word puzzel with no answer. None that satisfies her.

Sherry is puzzled—puzzled bad. She's been reading the papers industriously and she knows what it is all about down in Tennessee. She knows what the enraged combatants are saying one to another. She knows that she is a sceptic. But she doesn't know which kind!

And she has a right to her snarled-up mind.

For look at Sherry!

She is slim—but not too slim. She has bright, big eyes with three-quarter-inch lashes. Her hair is fine and silken and as long as she will permit it to grow, and shimmers with golden lights in the sun.

And being an honest young person, and understanding just how pretty she is—for how she not seen the devastation spread among divers young chaps she knows—she says to herself, studying the quaint faces that study her in return with wistful brows and thinking eyes, "ARE you my ancestor? Was your ancestor mine? It doesn't seem possible."

But if Sherry is a really wise young person she will remember that the life even of a girl, from babe to old lady, is unceasing evolution.

Every hour the work grows and changes, life slips from one from into another, the groping human brain finds a brighter new piece of knowledge to make life the better to live. The wonder of the Divinity that looms behind all things lies in its law of the evolving of life through Death into Life again.

Sherry will find the page open, wherever she turns, for her to read. And there is God on every page of it.

Whatever Sherry was, millions of years ago, she may be sure it belonged to Him, as all life does.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Dark Pessimism

By Lenore Neely Cook

ANGIE PRICE had been a pessimist all her life. Not that life had dealt harshly with her, but she always expected it to. And if life failed to rally to her support, it was really not her fault.

She always opened the door to dark, gloomy things and invited them to enter. She wouldn't be found unprepared either. She was ready for everything. She had procured lots in the town cemetery sufficiently large for the entire family. She often asked to be taken there Sundays when Roger was home and they went out for a pleasant walk.

Angie would point to the center of the empty plot and murmur sadly, "I want to be laid there, Roger, with my family all about me—then she would sigh and reflect sadly upon the fact that the plot had no tenant.

Then there was Edward and Leila, strong with youth and happiness, both of them.

Better Than Home

But they could never please their mother. If Leila brought a new man in for her mother to meet, Angie would always say, "But mother dear, you don't know him yet. Did you say he was studying law—here a prodigious sigh, "The very worst profession he could choose. I wouldn't see you tied to a lawyer for the world—they are born deceivers!"

It was Edward's secret ambition to write, but Angie belittled the first efforts he had brought to her. "You have to be a genius to succeed," she would sigh. "Editors don't want you unless you have a name."

So Edward left her with a cloud over his ambition. The first flush of his dream of life had been covered with a dismal wet blanket. He felt he had to get away from the dank atmosphere that savored so much of death and disillusion.

About that time Leila had reached the same conclusion. The young man, Diggs, whom her mother had not liked, wanted her to elope with him. She wasn't certain that she liked him at all, but anything was better than home.

The minute she stepped inside the door her spirit was snatched from her and squeezed almost to death. So one morning when breakfast was over and they had watched mother's long melancholy face and heard her depreciating remarks, saw with a chill how their father's shoulders were drooping, they packed and secretly left home.

Neither knew that the other had gone. Both left little notes.

Angie called the story incoherently to Roger over the telephone. Then she fainted. It looked as if Roger, lonesome plot in the cemetery might have an occupant soon. Roger didn't feel much like comforting her. You see he didn't really blame the children much. There had been times when he would have liked to break away, still—they might have let him in on their plans. They could trust him to understand. But could they?

"If something should happen to them, they would be buried in a pauper's grave—" she wailed afresh. Angie thought of the new fresh plot she had bought with the expectation of having her little family grouped about her.

At the mention of the word "grave," Roger's shoulders came up with a jerk and he planted himself before her, feet wide apart.

He shook his finger in her face. "You've lost your children by your confounded melancholy, and if I hear you mention anything of death or grave again, you'll lose me—"

She looked at him in surprise, then burst into tears again.

"None of you understand me," she whimpered. "You never have appreciated me—"

"Of course not," he snorted. "No one appreciates a kill-joy."

"Roger!" she shrieked. "Me—a kill-joy!"

Weeks Past

"That's what I said—if you hadn't always picked the sweets out of pleasure, your children wouldn't want to leave you."

She cowered, moaning on the sofa, her face buried in the pillows.

The weeks passed. No word came from Leila or Edward. Angie's face wore a mask of perpetual gloom. It made Roger groan just to look at her. On Sunday they started out for their regular pleasure trip to the cemetery. At least Roger turned his feet mechanically in that direction.

She followed by his side for a time then stopped short.

"No, not there—I never want to see the place again—" she whispered. Roger turned about again and they went home. It seemed the only place to go if the cemetery was taboo.

The long day stretched before them. They both jumped to the telephone as its bell pealed imperiously. But there was never any news. The police were keeping up the search but without results.

Monday Angie inserted a certain advertisement among the personals of a newspaper. She had spent hours over its composition.

On Tuesday, just at nightfall, two figures met at the front gate. They looked at each other and stopped.

"Leila, what are you doing here?" demanded Edward.

"Edward, where have you been?" asked Leila.

They extended their newspapers, both opened to the personals.

"Did you see this?" they questioned. "Well, what do you think of it?"

"I think we might try," wavered Edward, his hand on his sister's arm. He looked empty.

Together they went to the door. They listened a minute. Mother was talking with father. She was standing beside him, her hand on his shoulder. "We will believe that they will come back," she was saying with a brave smile. "We will look at the bright side of it, Roger!" Was this their mother speaking—the joy-killer?

The next moment Angie was gone over them, both safe in her arms. They had not been buried in a pauper's grave after all. Angie seemed glad.

Father looked at her surprised. He turned to Leila. "Where is Diggs?"

She blushed. "Oh, don't mention him—I didn't intend to marry him!" Then she showed him the line in the personal.

It read, "If Eddie and Leila will come home, mother will promise to break her habit of pessimism. It is so lonesome."

ROMANTIC HUSBAND

A Sequel to "Ways of a Husband"

By Anne Lisle

AND looking back on the days when Neal had disappeared with the unexplained thousands that belonged to the Dalton-Sturges Realty Corporation, it came to me with increasing force and horror that people are almost always ready to "believe the worst."

Park's voice sounded from the doorway. It was evident that he wanted to make his words seem casual, uncloaded by anything sinister.

"You've got those Hodkinses hipped Mrs. Anne Harrison," he said, using the old name. "You've got them buffaloed. They think you're a wonder. They're ready to do anything for you—to forget their conservative traditions—to leave me for you if they must—even to testify—to testify——"

His voice trailed off. Then he began again, brusquely this time.

"You may be glad to know that the family jewels are in our vault down in the city. There were jewels here—synthetic stones—imitations. The governor had a feeling that he wanted something to remind him of mother's loving bequest, but he wanted me to have her real jewels. He had them copied.

"Someone got away with the imitations all right. My theory is that Jim let that De Courcey girl and her brother help themselves—and that when she found out she had been double-crossed or whatever she thought it was, she staged a row—and then—this happened. It's all clear, Anne. I'm glad we're back—back in time for Mabel to take care of you while the trial is on. It won't be easy. But we will stand by, Mabel and I will see you through."

"Does Ralph think Jim guilty?" I asked with dry lips.

"How can he help it?" Park asked pityingly.

"Ralph, too?" I said. "Well—it looks as if Jim were alone against the world. But I'll fight the world—I know Jim is innocent. His worst crime has been flirting, philanderling. He doesn't know any more about this De Courcey—death than I do. And I'm going to prove it."

"But how, dearest?" Mabel asked with a world of sorrow and sympathy in her voice.

Johnny Tremaine came out to Park Manor for lunch. He came uninvited, but with the evident feeling that he ought to appear.

He acted like the friends who troop to a house of mourning, where the lonely ones who are left behind may also be left alone. He seemed to feel that "the least he could do was to come out from the city and bring the latest news of the De Courcey "murder," as the headlines now called it.

There in the formal Park Manor drawing room, where we were all gathered in grim expectancy, Johnny spread one of the papers before me with the air of a person having a terrible duty to do and wanting to get it over. Across the top of the sheet was blazoned:

"WHERE IS JIM HARRISON?" Disappearance of Man Wanted in Death Mystery.

"Fearless Jim of the Flying Forces," his title during war days. Is he afraid now? Can he tell something of De Courcey death?"

The article went on to ask:

"Can James Hunter Harrison, who is strangely missing from his usual haunts this morning, tell more than he cares to reveal about the sudden death of Brooke De Courcey? It is fairly sure that the girl was strangled or smothered. It looks as if human hands had marred the whiteness of her beautiful throat. There is a report that some deadly poison snuffed her life out in a minute. More will be revealed when the inquest is over. In the meantime, why does Harrison hide? He was the devoted slave of the beautiful Brooke, her shadow, in fact. Why is he no longer shadowing her?

"Evidently Harrison was aware of the death of the girl he once adored before her fate was known to the general public. How did he get the news? Why did he run away? These are questions he will be asked to answer. It is possible that Jim Harrison knows no more of the cruel ending to Brooke De Courcey's life than does the average innocent bystander.

Tomorrow morning is holiday time at Station WNAC, so Jean Sargent and Martha Lee won't be on the air over WNAC until Monday morning, when they will answer the many questions that members have asked about so many things.

WNAC IS THREE YEARS OLD

Station WNAC, the Shepard Stores, Boston, will celebrate its third anniversary tonight. This oldest of Boston stations has arranged a most extensive program of many of the favorite artists who have been heard from its studios during the course of the past three years.

This most varied program will start promptly at 6:30 with a special broadcast from the studios of the dinner dance by Morey Pearl and his Tent Orchestra. The last scheduled number, starting at 1:28 Saturday morning, will be that radio favorite Jimmie Gallagher and his Shore Garden's Orchestra.

The members of the Boston American Women's Club will hear the voices of Jean Sargent and Martha Lee through the air all night instead of their usual time in the middle of the morning, as both of them will have a few words to say during the evening.

Between the start and the close of the program will appear a great number of prominent artists who will entertain those tuned in on 830 meters.

As WNAC is noted as a station broadcasting the big sports events that are held in Boston, it is surely fitting that during the course of the program, at about 10 p. m., the Jack Sharkey-King Solomon bout will be broadcast direct from Braves Field.

We feel that a most unusual and favorable evening is in store for those radio fans listening in on this anniversary program.

Krazy Kat 'Tunes Up' For Radio Chat

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
Winthrop Square, Boston

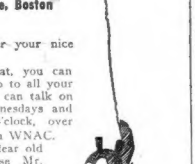
Dear Krazy Kat:

Thank you for your nice little letter.

Yes, Krazy Kat, you can talk over our Radio to all your little friends. You can talk on Mondays and Wednesdays and Fridays, at six o'clock, over the Radio at Station WNAC.

So get ready, dear old Krazy Kat, because Mr. Shepard will let you begin your talks over the Radio next Monday at six o'clock, to all the little girls and boys.

Your loving
RADIO EDITOR.



Little boys and girls!

Did you see in the paper yesterday about how the Radio Editor of the Boston Evening American got a letter from Krazy Kat, asking if the Radio Editor would let him talk over the radio to all the little girls and boys?

Well, when the Radio Editor read that letter, he went straight to the Managing Editor and to Mr. Shepard, who has the big Radio Station WNAC at the Shepard Stores. And he said to them:

"Mr. Editor and Mr. Shepard, our old friend Krazy Kat wants to talk over the Radio to the little girls and boys who like his pictures. Don't you think that would be a nice idea."

And the Editor of the Boston Evening American, and Mr. Shepard who has the big Radio Station, WNAC said, "Why yes, that is a fine idea."

Then they told the Radio Editor to write to Krazy Kat and tell him what to do.

So the Radio Editor wrote a letter right away to Krazy. See Krazy holding it!

Now little boys and girls, if you want to belong to the Krazy Kat Kiddie Klub and listen to Krazy Kat on the Radio, you must sit right down and write a letter to Krazy Kat, care of Station WNAC, Shepard Stores, and say that you want to belong to the club.

It will be a club for little boys and little girls from 6 to 12 years.

We want you all to write and say what you want for the club colors, and what you think would be nice for the favorite flower of the club.

And you must say what day is your birthday. Because Krazy Kat wants to know so that he can send you a greeting on your birthday.

And next Monday you must all listen in and hear Krazy Kat talking to you over Station WNAC.

BEDTIME STORY

PERSEUS RESCUES ANDROMEDA.

"OH, Foxy Grandpa," begged Bobby, "do please go on and tell me some more about Perseus. You had just gotten to where the awful monster was roving about that country in Africa eating up women and children, and Andromeda, the King's daughter, had sacrificed herself in order to save others—because the oracle said so."

"Oh, yes," I started. "Perseus swore that she should not be devoured by the monster while he lived. Then he asked where the Princess was. And her father said she was chained to a rock on the seacoast.

"Immediately Perseus flew up in the air on his magic sandals and directed his course toward the seashore.

"He had not flown long when he saw Andromeda. There she was, the poor girl, chained to a great rock by her two slender wrists, with nothing covering her but her long, heavy hair and the waves which were beating against her.

"But what really won the heart of Perseus was the brave expression on this beautiful young woman's face. Neither fear nor anger showed in her countenance.

"Perseus determined the moment he saw Andromeda that if he could not save her from the horrible death which seemed doomed to come to her, that he would not leave her alone, but would die with her.

"These noble thoughts were going through his mind while Perseus was trying to reach the maiden. But he did not reach her before he saw the cause of all this misery.

"For there right below him, the dark waves parted and out of them came the most horrible monster that Perseus had ever seen in his whole life. It was huge and black and had hundreds of terrible eyes glaring fiercely from every part of the awful body. And from every side of it grew great long twisting, slimy limbs. And out of its cavernous mouth streamed fire and smoke!

"Perseus sprang from the rock where he had lighted with his magic sandals and flew at the monster.

"Then started one of the greatest battles the world has ever heard of.

"Perseus struck one blow after another at the ferocious monster with the sword. It seemed invulnerable.

"Finally, Perseus thought he was done for. He felt himself growing weaker and weaker. His life was ebbing. What to do he did not know and there was the beautiful princess waiting for her turn to die in the arms of the monster. So he gave one last great effort. He raised his right arm and down came his sword on the shoulder of the fiend. At once the arms let loose of Perseus and the monster crumpled in the water and disappeared. Perseus had struck its one weak spot.

"Then Perseus unchained the beautiful princess, put her gently over his shoulder and flew swiftly through the air to her father's palace."

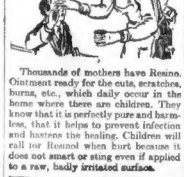
Scratches and Cuts



Thousands of mothers have Resinol Ointment ready for the cuts, scratches, burns, etc., which daily occur in the home where there are children. They know that it is perfectly pure and harmless, that it helps to prevent infection and hastens the healing. Children will call for Resinol when hurt because it does not smart or sting even if applied to a raw, badly irritated surface.

Lesson No. 25
FIVE TUBE SETS

The most common types of five-tube sets seem to be the neutrodyne and the un-neutralized tuned radio frequency sets. To the practical person there is no difference between these two types. In each case the set consists of two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio amplification. The neutrodyne is so called on account of the claim that the internal capacity of each tube is neutralized. The method of accomplishing this is through the use of a very small condenser which is connected between each radio frequency tube. The un-neutralized type of set acquires stable operation through the incorporation of a special radio frequency transformer having less primary turns than the neutrodyne types. Each of the sets have three adjustments and tune exactly in the same manner.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

Buy New England goods — support New England industries — best in the world.

Victory for Mr. Consumer

Edison Illuminating Company Is Not "Requested" or "Invited" to Lower Its Rate in Forty Massachusetts Cities and Towns, but Is ORDERED to Do So.

The news that comes down from the State House, that the Edison Illuminating Company of Boston has been ORDERED to lower its rate from 9½ cents per kilowatt hour to 8½ cents, is good news and encouraging news for more reasons than one.

In the first place, it comes at a time when the railroad bill and the telephone bill and other bills are taking or are about to take a little bit more out of John J. Citizen's family pocketbook, and when the high cost of living certainly gives no sign that it is getting ready to take a plunge.

This ORDER, by Chairman Attwill and his associates of the Public Utilities Board, is of interest to more than 180,000 consumers, in approximately forty cities and towns. In the course of a year it will mean a saving to the people of HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS.

What the Boston Evening American has been unable to understand is why a public service corporation like the Edison Company, and one so ably and so profitably conducted in other respects, should have held to its exorbitant rate of 9½ cents for so long a time while its own expenses were tumbling and in the face of a growing adverse public sentiment. In the latter months of these hearings before the Public Utilities Board similar organizations, in Brooklyn and elsewhere, lowered THEIR rates because, as they said, they wanted their customers to share in the benefits of decreased costs.

Our friends, the consumers, who are happily and profitably affected by the reduction in rates which is to go into effect on September 1, will please observe that the Edison Company is not "requested," "invited" or "urged" to cut its price to 8½ cents, but is ORDERED to do so.

If it HAD to take either, the Edison Company preferred a polite "recommendation."

An ORDER means that the next time consumers have to go to the mat with this monopoly the monopoly, and NOT the patient and long-suffering consumer, will have to PAY THE BILL.

"The Edison Company," its principal attorney said at the State House some time ago, "feels that it is NONE OF THE BUSINESS OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN what our customers pay for Edison Company service."

The Boston Evening American felt differently about that and today takes the keenest pride in the fact that in this grapple with a particularly greedy and high-handed monopoly it has been the privilege of this newspaper and its editors and attorneys to speak for Public Sentiment.

It is not the first time the Boston Evening American has been permitted to act as the voice of the plain people and we hope it may not be the last.

We congratulate the members of the Public Utilities Board upon the completion of a long and difficult task and the result thereof.

We congratulate them upon an ORDER which cannot help but be of value to the people, while at the same time it hurts and wrongs no man, least of all the Edison stockholders.

We congratulate Mr. Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., latterly the attorney for this newspaper, upon the skill, the tactfulness, the urbanity, the courage and the knowledge of the law which, from the moment of his eleventh-hour appearance in the Edison rate case, have marked his conduct of a now victorious battle on behalf of the community.

We congratulate ourselves upon our good fortune in enlisting a lawyer of Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr's., character and attainments who would take up and carry on the work so bravely entered into by the late Grenville S. MacFarland.

And, finally, we again congratulate you who READ the Boston Evening American, and whose splendid support has made this and other victories not only possible but inevitable.

Leaving the Farms

Don't Worry—Yet

The population of the country is increasing, but the population of the farms is decreasing. In 1924 that population diminished by 182,000.

No FARMERS would mean no FOOD. But there is no reason to worry yet.

Ten men with machinery can do farm work that a thousand men could not have done one hundred years ago. Better methods diminish the number of men needed.

Henry Ford believes that proper use of machinery would enable the farmer to do his work in two or three months, devoting the rest of the year to something else.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson.

HARIET wants to know why men "seem to adore worthless women." Harriet's brother has married such a woman, according to Harriet. And the sister's heart is aching because this brother was the dearest thing on earth to her. Oscar, the brother, was a sickly youngster.

A sweet-natured boy, but shy and painfully timid. He never mixed with other boys; he shrank from their jeers and brooded over their possible ridicule. A coward? Yes. But a gentle, lovable coward.

When he grew to manhood his keen intellect enabled him to make good in business, but his timidity and self-consciousness still persisted. Then, just when things seemed to be brightening, he made the marriage which Harriet deplores.

Married Fluffy Blonde.

Sue Fuller—Oscar's wife—was a fluffy blonde with the brain of a tadpole. A lazy, stupid, pretty little lump of suet. She had proved capable enough in her mother's home, under that stern lady's administration, but the day she married Oscar she draped herself about his neck and there she has stayed ever since.

They have one child, and until Oscar's salary advanced sufficiently to employ a maid, he did most of the work. As it is now, he does everything for his lady, save breathe.

"And the worse of it, HE LIKES IT!" wails Harriet. "He talks as if Sue was the most wonderful woman on earth and I am sure he believes it. He actually quotes her opinions, and I don't suppose she has ever had a real thought in all her life.

And if she does the least little bit of work, he fusses as if she was killed. It does make me mad, Elsie, when I think of the work our mother used to do and the work he has seen me do. But you can't make Oscar see that she isn't perfect.

"He isn't the only one, either, Elsie. I have known dozens of fine men who have married worthless women like that and simply worship them. And, on the other hand, you see splendid women deserted and abused. I suppose there is no explanation for it."

Yes, there is an explanation for it, Harriet. The explanation probably won't prevent the Oscars from marrying the Sues, but it may make other women less bitter over the spectacle.

The majority of men do not marry women. They marry IDEAS. They marry the idea of a gentle, comfortable soul, something like their mother. Or, a merry, blood stirring, jazz idea. Oscar didn't marry any of these ideas. He married instead, THE IDEA OF WEAKNESS. The idea of SOMETHING HE COULD PROTECT. All his life he had been the weakling—the coward—the ridiculed one. The smallest boy in his class could lick him. The snubbiest, most vulgar boy could outwit him by sheer bravado. No one had ever leaned on him, or looked up to him, or come to him for protection. And here at last was an exquisite, clinging little creature who NEEDED HIM, and before whom he could pose as a BIG, BRAVE, BOLD, RESOURCEFUL MAN. Naturally, he simply burned up the trail to the wedding altar.

Doesn't Bother

Do you begin to see, Harriet? Sue's laziness doesn't bother Oscar, for the lazier she is the more efficient he will seem by contrast. Nor does he know that she is stupid and selfish and spineless.

These very attributes, which you so scorn, give Oscar his chance to strut his stuff—to do a Napoleon. He'd be utterly lost and miserable if his Sue suddenly became a self-sufficient lady who didn't need his protection.

Strange, isn't it? Yet that's often the way we're made. And maybe there's a lesson for strong-er folks in spineless Sue and visionary Oscar. Are you an IDEA as well as a human? If not, why not?

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

SO MANY summer tourists are bringing in booze from Canada that the United States government has hired a lot of expert baggage sniffers.

ALL they have to do is walk around the customs house and smell the luggage.

A BAGGAGE sniffer is the whole cheese. His nose is law.

HIS beak is like a compass. It points in the direction of any suspicious suitcase.

NINE times out of ten he keeps going around in circles.

THERE'S a kick in every hand bag.

AND a headache in every trunk.

THESE naval officers don't suspect everybody. They only follow the man who's carrying his own grip.

YOU can always tell what he's got in it by the way he sets it down.

IF HIS baggage was important, his wife would be carrying it.

AND if he didn't have a wife, he'd hand it to a porter.

YOU can enter the United States with as many bottles of booze as you want, providing they're in you and not in your suit case.

THIS is a free country. America doesn't care how much you drink in Canada.

BUT the only part of the drink you're allowed to carry across the border is the headache.

PEOPLE who live in Detroit and want to patronize home industries are taking their own ginger ale with them when they go to Ontario.

THEY try to be patriotic, but the American Eagle isn't half as popular as Canadian Swallows.

THE U. S. government is thinking of putting owls on silver coins for people who want to spend their money at night.

TOURISTS who go to Canada for the scenery will have no trouble at all, providing they drink it before they come home.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

GOLD is the color that all men love, were but the truth confessed, showers of gold from the sun above, gold in the miser's chest. Little the miser, and bent and old, soon he must fare along, still he finds clinking of hoarded gold sweeter than lyre or song. Golden and brown is the honey-bee, golden his fragrant store; golden the waves of the sunset sea, golden the sands on the shore, Gold is the color that all desire, gold is the meadow-lark's breast, gold is the tongue of the leaping fire, golden the autumn's crest. Which of all gold has the rarest hue? Which is the gold most dear? Gold of the sun in its field of blue? Gold of the waning year? Never, ah, never; the fairest gleams close in my arms; hold; spun for the joy of a mother's dreams. Baby's bright locks of gold!

DR. FRANK CRANE ON SILENCE OF POWER

By DR. FRANK CRANE

VERY often we witness the spectacle of a strong man and forceful who is completely controlled by his wife. She may be a modest, little thing, and unobtrusive, but she manages to run the whole show.

It is not bluster and noise and confusion that are signs of power. Power is silent.

The wave striking against the rock is shattered into a spray. Yet the continuing beat of the wave against the rock eventually carves and alters the rock.

There is the old fable of the sun and wind as to which was stronger. The case was tried with the man and his cloak. When the wind blew the man only hugged his coat tight about him, but when the sun shone the man threw it off. This shows that the sunshine, which is silent, is more powerful than the wind, which is noisy.

Most people do not want to be great; they want to seem great. They do not want to play the piano, for that involves years of practice and hard work. What they want is the applause and conspicuity that come from playing the piano well.

But there is no short cut to the right kind of fame. It is built up upon years of silent, hard work.

The sand appears very weak and formless, but a little of it getting into the machinery can stop a tractor.

You have often heard a tremendous roaring in the street and discovered that it was a motorcycle. It looks as though the smaller the machine, the more noise it makes.

Nobody can hear gravitation, yet it is the most tremendous force in the world.

It is more powerful than high explosives, than cannon, than volcanoes or than storms. It lays its hand upon every particle of matter and drags it down. Yet it is the quietest of all forces.

So love does not make as much noise as hate. It does not function in quarrels and loud talking. It is quiet and submissive and humble. Yet it is the greatest force in the world.

ORBITS AND AXES OF THE PLANETS

By Garret P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

"In another of your interesting articles please tell us what is the inclination of the poles of the various planets to the ecliptic, and whether they all revolve around the sun, and on their axes, in the same direction. Also the moons of Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune—in what direction do these move?—B. O."

THE ecliptic marks the plane in space in, or upon, which the earth travels around the sun. It might be likened to an invisible floor on which the earth circles, like a skater skimming round and round a central point on the level platform of a rink.

Now, the other planets, though all having the same central point (the sun) travel round it on different invisible floors, or planes, each more or less inclined to the earth's. So the great solar ring may be said to have a multiplicity of floors, tipped in slightly different planes, but all intersecting along lines passing through the common centre.

Every floor is used by a single planet, but the planets never get into collision because each travels at a different distance from the centre, so that their paths (orbits) never meet.

Spin on Axis

As they go round the sun in their respective planes, they also spin on their axes and the axes are all more or less inclined from a perpendicular to the planes, like the pegs of tops leaning at various angles to the floor on which they run about.

So we see that there are two inclinations to be taken into account. First, there is the inclination of the plane of the orbit of each planet to the plane of the earth's orbit, i. e., to the ecliptic, and second, there is the inclination of the axis of each planet to the plane of its own orbit.

Take first the inclination of the orbit to the ecliptic. In the case of the earth this is zero, because the ecliptic is only the projection of the plane of the earths orbit. And, living on the earth, we naturally, or necessarily, take the ecliptic as a fundamental plane by which to measure the inclination of the orbits of all the other planets.

It is known, however, by mathematical reasoning that there exists a fundamental plane, called the "invariable plane" of the solar system, to which the planes of all the orbits, including the earth's, should be referred; but this is not currently used, its position not having, as yet, been absolutely determined.

Referred to the ecliptic the inclinations of the other orbital planes are closely as follows:

Mercury, 7 deg.; Venus, 3 deg. 23 min.; Mars, 1 deg. 51 min.; Jupiter, 1 deg. 18 min.; Saturn, 2 deg. 29 min.; Uranus, 0 deg. 46 min.; Neptune, 1 deg. 6 min. From this we see that the orbit of Uranus, next to the most distant planet, is the nearest in accord with the plane of the earth's orbit.

It may be remarked that the best calculation of the position of the invariable plane, spoken of above, makes its inclination to the ecliptic 1 deg. 35 min., which lies between the inclinations of Jupiter and Saturn, the two heaviest planets, and it not greatly discordant with that of Neptune, the most distant planet.

Next we come to the inclination of the planetary axes from a perpendicular to the planes of the orbits. Here the differences are far greater than in the case of the orbital inclinations.

The earth's axis is inclined 23 deg. 27 min.; that of Mars, 24 deg. 50 min.; that of Saturn, 26 degl 48 min. But the axis of Venus seems to be nearly, if not quite, perpendicular to the orbital plane, i. e., it has no inclination, while the inclinations of the axes of Mercury, Uranus and Neptune, if any exists, are uncertain or unknown.

That of Jupiter's axis is also small, amounting to only 3 deg. 8 min., while the inclination as great as the inclination of Saturn's axis. It is singular that the axes of the two largest planets should be so different in inclination, while their orbital inclinations are so similar.

At a Right Angle

But, although the inclination of the axes of Uranus and Neptune is unknown, their satellites travel in planes which are so inclined to the ecliptic that the four moons of Uranus revolve at almost a right angle to the plane of the earth's orbit, the inclination being 97 deg. 88 min. while the single moon of Neptune actually travels in a "backward" direction, the inclination of its orbit being 138 deg. 8 min., or 42 deg. more than a right angle.

All the planets travel in the same direction around the sun (west to east), but the two most distant of Jupiter's moons, the eighth and ninth, travel backward, as does the ninth moon of Saturn, whose interesting name is Phoebe.

DO YOU FIND PLEASURE IN GOOD LUCK OF OTHERS?

Are you one of those persons who dislikes to see another enjoying something which you had not wanted till the other seemed to get pleasure out of it?

It may be a choice of rooms in the home.

You thought you wanted a certain exposure. Then you saw how attractive sister or brother had made the room you refused at first, and now you are so keen to change that you are fairly disagreeable.

It is even so with the friends and acquaintances you make.

You have said that So-and-So possessed no characteristics pleasing to you. Later you see that certain other persons find a delight in his society and then you try to crowd in and crowd him out.

Why can you not have a mind of your own?

Are you naturally jealous? Are you incapable of seeing persons as they are until another's actions point out pleasing qualities?

Really it is only pigishness which makes you want what another has and enjoys.
